THE CHICAGO FIRE cannot quench the flame of patriotism. It deepens us of our SECURITY, and current emerging in our very HOME; all values are shrinking; even the RATOONS are breaking up; where will it end? From MANHATTAN to shivering, and the cries about the MARKET? Winds of WASHINGTON, on Sunday, then turmoil gone, losing faith even in the REPUBLIC, while the backward is still

CHICAGO!

GOING!! GONE!!!

In this crisis our KNICKERBOCKER holds poised, and while he is losing faith in the motto EXCELSIOR, he trusts in the old EAGLE, to the full blast, still soaring in his broad MECHANICS' AND TRADERS', taking pride in NEW-YORK and BROOKLYN, as they rise. FRENCH fire, from the ashes. We are not broken long, as we have our MERCHANTS', and can boast of such thoroughfares as the BROADWAY and the BOWERY.

A lucky STAR is still guiding us, and while we revere the memory of JEFFERSON and FRANKLIN and our NATIONAL feeling for COLUMBIA is unabated, our most pride glories in our PARK, as a blessing to the sufferers of NEW-AMSTERDAM.

Cheer up, then, for the UNION is still strong, and our loyalty with England strengthens the amity between the NORTH BRITISH and other MOTHER Dominions, while the QUEEN smiles with satisfaction.

The people of LIVERPOOL AND LONDON and the rest of the GLOBE rejoice with the CITIZENS of our own METROPOLITAN district, that there are still a few more left strong enough for any emergency, pledging our MANUFACTURERS AND BUILDERS to make our sister City of Chicago the Pride of the West.

The excitement in this City was second only to the weather question, and, while the latter was "TOO THIN," the former came in for its full share to any one to comprehend. At the old fogies of the UNITED STATES knew it beforehand. The Chicago men, in its extent, was a conflagration unheard of. Men and beast ran crazy like wildfire, and the BUFFALOES were running loose all over this State, rushing in their flight the COMMERCE on their way to ALBANY CITY. What is the moral of all this turmoil? It is, LIVE AND LET LIVE. There is room for all. Let the business be conducted in a business-like way and give EQUITABLE rates for what you charge. Another suggestion we have to make is this, build your houses not for a glassy surface, but for such qualities as would wear well. Dismiss the French style; put good solid roofs to your houses, and not a three-story French mansard frame tower over two-story frontage. Positive and corruptive to handle in haste, and while the latter is decided high-handed, the small fry, anxious to get some of the spoils, turn incendiaries, to rob and plunder the people, who are the biggest sufferers, and still be a friend to the fire. Your little cash are shivering in the cold. Help help Chicago. You cannot do enough. The misery will last through the Winter.

Fellow-citizens, you are in danger of jumping out of the fire into the frying-pan. To be insured, and such insurers, look to an experienced and trustworthy underwriter. Sling out, then, and if your votes is not strong enough, engage WACHTEL. But don't speak all at once. Look for one immediately, look intelligently, call loud at No. 44 Exchange-place. Your cry will be heard and your mind put to rest by jumble of affairs it is not easy to make out the course of any one party, but I have an idea that M. THIERS is working very hard for himself; that since the failure of HENRI V., and the loss of the opportunity LOUIS PHILIPPE II. had at the beginning, the Legitimists and Orleanists are ready to go over to the Empire rather than see the Republicans succeed; while the latter are doing all in their power to destroy confidence in the Government of M. THIERS, their only remedy, and are opposing an appeal to the people because the majority of the people seem to be against them. Such is the pâcle-mêle of French politics at this time, and such the reasons for my belief that the Emperor stands a better chance of being the next ruler of France than any other. Yet if he does come back nothing can or will stop the gradual growth of Republican ideas in Europe, and the time may not be so very far distant when our system of government, a little modified, will be within the reach of the people of every European State.

Your most obedient servant,

THE REPRESENTATIVE FOR AMERICA.

The Presse says that the appointment of M. JULES FERRY as Minister to Washington must be regarded as inevitable. Nothing, it seems, the clamors of the people, the warnings of the Press, or the protest which has recently come from England, saying that to send M. FERRY to Washington would be a great discredit to France, has had any effect upon the Government, and it has decided that M. FERRY shall be sent to the United States. M. THIERS is obliged, he says, to "yield to incessant and irresistible demands for this appointment." It is difficult to imagine from whence these demands can come. The Press is unanimously opposed to M. FERRY, the diplomatic corps is hostile to the appointment, and the people raise their voices at once against sending a man who has once been removed from office for incapacity to represent the country in so important a post. The diplomats themselves grumble at the very discussion of this project, and they confess that it wounds their most tender sensibilities. The Duc DE BROGLIE, Ambassador at London, is said to have remarked that "the moment M. FERRY is worthy to be made a member of the corps I am not worthy to remain his colleague, and I shall ask to be replaced by PASCHAL GROUSSARY." "The Duc is not wrong," says the Univers, and the Patrie adds that he "would be the times right if he would carry with him the whole diplomatic corps." The Bank of France knew how to get rid of M. RICARD, by all odds the best of the men of the 4th September, and, if it has the same spirit, the diplomatic corps can prevent M. FERRY from entering its ranks. I have no idea what the object of this persecution can be, but I am told that M. THIERS heard what there would be an objection to M. FERRY at Washington, and that his stubbornness was aroused to the point of swearing that M. FERRY should go to Washington, whether it was liked or not. One thing is sure—I have yet to find the first defender of M. FERRY, and the journals denounce him in language which the New-York papers would hardly apply to a thief. Under the circumstances, it would be extremely impolitic to make this appointment, for the people of Washington could not receive M. FERRY without losing the esteem of the best people of France.

FRAUDS ON THE GOVERNMENT.

The report of M. BIANT, read before the Assembly, denouncing frauds in the purchase of arms, is just now causing a great deal of discussion, and some facts have come to light which put a different face upon the affair. One large and honorable firm, bearing that they were to figure in the report, wrote to the Commission for the purpose of offering their accounts in evidence. Getting no reply, one of the firm went in person, and offered to testify before the Committee. The reply was, it is useless—it is all settled. The Commune VAN DE VEYER, writes a very spirited letter, in which she gives convincing proof that she did not swindle the Government, because it has not yet paid for its contracts. Further, the spirited lady says that the figures are entirely incorrect, and that a large sum has been added to the accounts since the bills were rendered. Others say the same. From this it appears that some one in authority made the accounts to suit his own pocket, and pocketed the extra price, for which the contractors are denounced. At the same time it is found that the man who has been claiming prospective profits, which ought to have been made, as in the case of FEAR, is the man who furnished "all the information which the Committee desired." Thus in an ex parte proceeding of the first water, and more scandalous than the frauds. But the parties attacked are pushing the matter, and the guilty official may be unearthed and brought to justice, unless, indeed, a fortunate burglary removes the vouchers in time.

The Abolition of the Feudal System—Decree of the Mikado—What the Measure Really Means—Interesting Details of the Movement.

From Our Own Correspondent.

YOKOHAMA, Wednesday, Sept. 13, 1871.

The concentration in Yeddo of large bodies of troops from the southern provinces, and the significant movement of some of the leading men of the country, has led us to believe for some time that the rumors of important political changes about to be made were not wholly without foundation. It must be acknowledged for once that Dame Rumor has in this case taken not only ourselves, but the whole nation, more or less by surprise, as her utterances have fallen far short of the reality. The text of these changes, and their immense importance, are found in the following edict from the Mikado:

In these times of reformation, it appears to me if it, in our desire to really aid our people, and make them happy, as well as take an honorable position among nations, we must act in such a way that the reality shall be all that is implied in the name.

This, we believe, can only be accomplished by the concentration of the governmental power of the nation.

Some time since I ordered the feudal Governments of Hana to send up to me a full report of the affairs of their provinces. I saw fit at the same time to reduce the power of the Princes to that of Governors, and prescribe anew their duties. But some of these Princes, having for several hundred years ruled more or less absolutely their domains, did not give heed to my order, and, neglecting their duties in other respects, appear to think of being a Prince only in name.

With such a condition of things our people cannot be made happy, nor can our country take an honorable position among nations.

I have deeply lamented this state of things for some time, and, as the only remedy for it, abolish the ancient feudal territorial divisions, and consolidating them all into my Imperial domain.

Those who are in authority and command, that are performing your duties, do away with all that is not practical; enter upon a system of retrenchment; cut off all unnecessary expenses and abrogate all troublesome laws.

Read in the presence of the Mikado, by the President of the Council of State, to all the rulers of the provinces assembled in the palais.

14th day, 7th month of 4th year Meiji.

In a word, by this edict a feudal system centuries old, and one essentially representing the political condition of the country, has been at once and finally abolished, and the Government centralized under the Imperial rule of the Mikado. From no quarter do we hear of any opposition, and I learn, on good authority, that there is no probability of there being any which will materially retard the efforts of the new Administration at consolidation.

The next question which naturally suggests itself is, what is to be done with these feudal chieftains? what disposition is to be made of them and of their territories? They are first commanded to report at the capital, with the majority of their retainers. They will then be called upon to deliver up the right and title to their estates, with all their arms, munitions of war, ships, &c., which, under their martial independence, came under the head of State property. Such of the Princes as are considered able and fit to fill offices under the consolidated Government (and who fit will be necessary to consolidate) will be provided for, and those who are not will be pensioned. But all will be ordered henceforth to reside in Yeddo, the capital of the empire. This is probably a precautionary measure against their creating trouble by coalitions with disaffected retainers. In the meantime the Government assumes all the debts of the Princes, and holds itself liable for the paper currency they have put in circulation, so that the masses may not suffer by the change.

The solution of this part of the problem is easier by far than that which calls upon the retainers of these Princes to give up their swaggering idleness, guaranteed heretofore by the revenues of their Lords, and in place of the two swords which they have worn for generations as a badge of their superiority over the producing masses, take up implements of husbandry to earn their bread. This class number at least one tenth of the population of the whole country, and as new profiteers or, as the promoters of the new régime call them, "eaters of the bread of the nation," have exhausted the resources of the country for ages, without giving in return even the national dignity which a large standing army usually imposes. Protected as this country is by its isolation from powerful colonies, a comparatively small army will only be required by the consolidated Government, consequently this horde of retainers will not be needed. We then return to the question, What is to be done with them? or, what will they do with themselves? Will they quietly submit, or throw themselves into revolutionary guerrilla bands, to forage upon and destroy the interior? The Princes themselves will probably quietly and cheerfully submit, because they cannot successfully resist. The four Southern Princes, SATSUMA, CHOSHIU, NABESHIMA and TOSA, are the only ones of the eighteen great feudal chieftains of the old Government who have any money, and they are the leaders in the present political changes. In fact, they are the Government. All the Ministers and chief officers of the Mikado are from their clans. They are the men who overthrew the dynasty of the Tycoon four years ago, and placed the Mikado, the real Emperor, on the throne. They took the initiative in the work of centralization, by surrendering their principalities to the Mikado, in the same manner as they now ask the others to do, with this slight difference, that they, as a matter of course, claimed the chief appointments in the new Government for their own people.

The present Mikado, or, as in former times, the spiritual Emperor, is claimed by every Japanese as a direct descendant from the Gods, and the progenitor of their race. With this important personage as the crowning stone of the structure, these four Princes feel themselves able to undertake what has been set forth in the edict of the Mikado, who, like most hereditary monarchs, is of course but the passive instrument of the faction which is for the time in power.

With the prestige which occupation gives, with the revenues of the country arising from foreign trade, the power to raise a currency or borrow from foreigners with a respectable army of well-drilled troops, one can easily believe that the consolidation can be made.

This feudal aristocracy divided society into two great classes—namely, the Samurai, or the hereditary retainers of the Princes, who thought all labor unbecoming and undignified, and the great mass of common people who labored to support themselves. So immovable were these boundaries fixed that by no means, however meritorious and honorable, could one of the lower order be raised into the ranks of the Samurai longer than during his life-time. The husbandman, merchant, tradesman, were all looked upon as menials, and treated accordingly. But the abolition of feudalism has swept away all those distinctions, and henceforth rank and distinction have no other basis than that of merit. Even the most despised—the yeta, or tanners and workers in leather—have been invited to leave the exclusive communities in which they were obliged to live, and enter the democratic ranks of the united nation, whose motto is today "that all men are born free and equal."

This seems more incredible than the abolition of the feudal system itself, and it cannot fail to impress the people as a righteous step, affording as it does a great contrast to Japan rule under the old régime. The masses are, of course, rejoicing at this change. They feel no pity for the deposed Princes or their arrogant retainer.

The opening of the whole country to foreign trade is now probable, even without a formal demand from any foreign Power.

The Political Campaign Fully Opened—The Conservative Discussions—Efforts to Raise Discords Among the Republicans—R. A. Pollard in a New Role.

From Our Own Correspondent.

RICHMOND, Va., Thursday, Oct. 12, 1871.

The State Conservative Committee has hit upon a most notable plan to heal the divisions in the party. This is the appointment of over one hundred canvassers, who are urged to take the stump at once, with only this text, "Opposition to Radicalism!" But, unfortunately, the well-laid scheme is likely to come to speedy grief, because the canvassers themselves have their opinions of the past, as local questions, about which the people are excited, and these opinions are by no means unanimous. Some are for repudiation, and some against it; some are for the Funding bill, and some against it, and so on. Where a canvasser will not take a decided stand on one side or the other of these vital issues, but seeks to wander into "glittering generalities" and vague non-committalisms, the people will not listen to him. Only the other day, Hon. RALEIGH T. DANIEL, Chairman of the Conservative State Committee, accepted a nomination for the House of Delegates from this city, and, in his speech of acceptance, declaimed against repudiation and in favor of the Funding bill, and against outside railroad corporations—showing how inevitable it is that, though a Conservative State Convention may be silent on these topics, every active participant in this campaign must declare himself fully, without equivocation or evasion.

The crop of independent Conservative candidates grows like mushrooms. Not only are the legislative aspirants merely, but the people themselves are shockingly insubordinate. The managers here are surprised and indignant at the independence evinced by the populace, which they have ruled so long. The plan of organization by tens, fifties, and hundreds, which I formerly characterized as the most Jesuitical political machinery ever invented to control men, does not take with the masses. In some counties they utterly refuse to have anything to do with it, and the Superintendents appointed by the central power here have nobody to superintend. Pathetic circulars are sent around by the "Chief Director" imploring all good citizens to unite for just this once in "opposition to Radicalism," no matter if the plan be distasteful in some of its parts. But the people addressed do not unite. They, in many cases, are uniting with the "Radicals," (as the Republicans are called,) in opposition to the bondholders, brokers and high taxes, and the prospect is beginning to look very favorable for a Republican triumph here in November.

But the Conservative managers are shrewd. Seeing how fearfully their own party is torn by internal dissensions, they have artfully attempted, and already with some success, to promote the same evils in the Republican ranks. In all Eastern and South-eastern Virginia, where the negroes are in majority, or form at least nine-tenths of the Republican voters, the design of the Conservatives is apparent enough, to inflame the negroes against white Republicans whenever a white nominee is put up, and to incite them to run a candidate of their own color. This movement finds some dupes among the negroes, and, where it does not find dupes, it purchases the assistance of knaves, who, in the Conservative interests, stir up the ignorant colored people to what is called an assertion of their rights. The game was very well played in the First Congressional District last year, where, with an overwhelming Republican majority, Hon. JOHN M. CRITCHER, Conservative, was elected, because the Republican vote was divided between two candidates, a white one and a colored one. It is now attempted in this city and county, and on Saturday last there was a so-called Republican gathering at Henrico Court-house which pretended to amend the tickets heretofore regularly nominated. Like attempts are heard of in other counties, but the game will be understood before election day, and will hardly win.

Mr. EDWARD A. POLLARD announces that he has now in press a work called The Lost Cause, or a history of the negroes since emancipation. Mr. POLLARD, in calling for colored agents for the sale of his book, says: "It is the author's special design to have this book circulated among all the reading negroes of the South as a peculiar work for their instruction and encouragement. It is, in this sense, their book." Before the war Mr. POLLARD wrote Black Diamonds, a work chiefly devoted to sketches of negro character, and since the war he has written articles on the negro for the Old and New, Putnam's Monthly, The Galaxy, Lippincott's Magazine, &c. The book he now announces is doubtless a fusion of what he wrote before the war with what he has written since, as he is a great revamper of his own and other people's writings. I believe that Mr. POLLARD was of one time a strong advocate of the reopening of the slave trade with Africa.

THE FALL PARTY.

Return of the Expedition to Salt Lake City—Endless Morning Parade—Reception of the Knights Templar—Impressions of the Mormon Struggle.

From Our Own Correspondent.

GREAT SALT LAKE CITY, Monday, Oct. 9, 1871.

We have once more returned to civilization. With an escort of ten men, a train of three wagons and a mounted guard horses, we left Fort Bridger, in Wyoming, on the 25th of August. We reached it again on the 8th of September. Our line of march was steadily east, but our most distant camp was less than thirty miles from the fort, so abundant were the fossil remains and so thorough were our researches. The country through which we passed is of a depressing nature. It consists of desert plains, too sterile to produce grass, but thickly overgrown with the everlasting sage-brush, varied only by desert buttes. Every stream, however, (and there are many more here than in Kansas,) marks its course through the gray expanse by a row of cotton-woods and a narrow strip of rich, deep grass. The water is good, but slightly tinged with alkali, and the fishing is superb. During the two weeks which we spent on Henry's Fork, twenty-eight miles east of the fort, over one thousand trout were caught, and still the supply seemed inexhaustible. In one day three men landed 360, the united weight of which was over three hundred pounds. Besides this superfluity of fish, our larder was supplied with sage-hen, rabbit, beaver, antelope and deer. Wolves, coyotes and pumas we shot at in vain; elk we wounded but did not kill, and upon the grizzly bear we gazed at a safe distance with great respect. This latter animal was seen only by those of the party who went on exploring expeditions among the magnificent Uintah Mountains. This range, the only one in the Rockies which runs east and west, lay a few miles to the south of our route. The views which it presents are superb. The first line of high mountains is covered with a dense pine forest, and behind and far above rises a range of snow-capped peaks. The forest, however, is rapidly disappearing. The untutored savage has unfortunately conceived the brilliant idea that if the woods are destroyed a beautiful green sward will take their place and attract again the vast herds of buffalo which roamed here thirty years ago, but which have long since departed. Accordingly, the melting of each Winter's snows is the signal for the kindling of vast fires, which often rage for months. All argument with the Indians is in vain. They stubbornly persist in their folly. Day after day we saw the heavy clouds of smoke rising, and night after night the mountain-sides were masses of flame. The country around Bridger is the home of the Utes, who, cowed by repeated defeats, are now "good Indians." The frontiersman definition of a "bad Indian," however, is one who kills you first and robs you afterward, while, according to the same authority, a "good" one merely reverses the process. It is considered unsafe to meet them when outnumbered, even by the old mountaineers, many of whom have lived here for the last thirty or forty years, trapping, hunting and raising stock and anticipating the Mormon revelation of the legality of many wives. These men all look fondly back to the time when the Hudson's Bay Company ruled here, and delight in reminiscences of the good old days when game was abundant and railroads unknown. The weather on our trip was all that one could wish. There was little rain, the days occasionally hot, were usually just comfortably warm, and the nights were cold enough to make both buffalo-robe and blankets acceptable. After about the middle of September ice formed each night.

SCIENTIFIC RESULTS OF THE TRIP.

From a scientific point of view, our trip was a very successful one. In a region seven thousand feet above the sea we have unearthed large quantities of bones of animals resembling the turtle, lizard, serpent, crocodile, rhinoceros, tapir and elephant of tropical climes, and found, besides, fossils of all dimensions, down to a tiny tooth scarcely larger than the head of a pin. In fact, the greater number of discoveries have been those of very small remains, and consequently all the more valuable. Fossil-hunting has been harder work than in Kansas; for, instead of riding at our ease, and forcing sure-footed mules to clamber up and around the buttes while we looked from our saddles for a gigantic rib or vertebra, we have literally crawled over the country on our hands and knees. To see these minute bones the eye must be brought within three or four inches of the white clay on and in which they lie. There seems to be as much chance in their pursuit as in mining. A man of experience may go over a quarter of a mile of the most inviting ground and find little or nothing, while, meantime, the merest tyro may happen upon a butte which seems almost made of fossils. When two or three find such a field together, the excitement is great. Lines are drawn, marking the portion allotted to each, with almost as much care as when a valuable mineral claim is located, and the whole butte is thoroughly searched. Competition is keen, for each man has full credit for all discoveries which he may make, and the thought of being immortalized by some huge skeleton in the Yale Museum, which shall be labeled—"Palæosaype Peckt, presented by the discoverer," is a tempting one. Very many new specimens have been found, but exactly how many cannot be known until the boxes which we have forwarded to New-Haven are opened, and their contents carefully examined by Prof. MARSH after his return.

WHOLESALE DESERTION ON THE PLAINS.

The garrison of Fort Bridger is no exception to the general rule of the prevalence of desertion. Out of one hundred and sixty men, who two months ago formed the two companies stationed there, one hundred have since deserted. Veterans and raw recruits go alike. The cause is, of course, the reduction of the pay. The soldiers inveigh bitterly against this action on the part of Congress, and say that, although not a violation of the letter of the contract, it is of the spirit. The amount which they can now save from their wages is so small that few attempt to lay by anything, and drunkenness is said to be more prevalent than ever before. An absurd rumor is current among them to the effect that Congress has determined to reduce the army greatly, and, not daring to do so openly, has decided upon this plan of making the pay so low that the men will be almost forced to desert. I have heard this idea repeatedly, and it is this plea that the best men allege as an excuse for their intended flight, for they speak to a civilian of their intentions of this sort with refreshing frankness. The evil is a serious one. Probably there are few companies as badly off now as a certain one which is said to have the names of two hundred deserters on its roll, but, from what we have seen and heard, it seems as if even this record might be soon eclipsed by other commands.

THE MORMON CAPITAL.

After a day spent at the fort in packing and forwarding the results of our trip, we started for this city of many wives. Between Bridger and Ogden, where we took the Utah Central train for Salt Lake, the Union Pacific passes through the famed Wahsatch cañons. The road winds through the narrow valley, often nothing but a deep chasm, and in many places the bare rock rises perpendicularly almost two thousand feet, its crest wrought by wind and rain into turret and archway and wall. As soon as "Pulpit Rock," from which BRIGHAM YOUNG is said to have preached his first sermon to the "Promised Land" was passed, Salt Lake began to manifest himself, for we ran through, in rapid succession, the "Devil's slide," "Devil's Gate," and "Devil's Hoop." As usual, the finest views are so named. From Ogden, a two hours' ride through a dreary waste of sand brought us here, and since then our time has been devoted to sight-seeing. We have seen some wonderful sights. When its history is considered, this city seems to me a marvel. Twenty-three years ago the advance guard of the "Latter Day Saints" camped on this desert of alkali and sage-brush. For weeks and months they lived on the roots and berries which they gathered and the game which they could find to kill. During the Winter they were in such terrible straits that a raw hide was a delicacy. It was two years before many of them tasted bread. Meanwhile every one had his or her individual task, and all the tasks were done. Today one finds here a city of 12,000 inhabitants, with broad and straight streets, every one lined with trees and with pure, clear water running through the gutters. (It is no unusual thing to see a man drink from a gutter.) a city with a number of good residences, with numberless gardens, with fine and crowded stores, and with a Tabernacle which can hold 16,000 people, and yet utterly fails to accommodate the crowds at the semi-annual conferences, when all Utah is concentrated here. The whole city is sui generis, with the exception of the main street, where one could easily fancy himself in any other western town of the same size, were it not for the signs of "Zion's Mercantile Co-operative Institution—Holiness to the Lord," which adorn so many of the Mormon stores. The morality of the city has become, during the last year, far below what the Mormons claim. There are more drinking-saloons here than in Denver, and many of them, nominally closed, are really open on Sunday. Gambling-hells abound, and the social evil flourishes here, very secretly, to be sure, but yet largely. Yesterday afternoon we heard ORSON PRATT preach to an illiterate-looking audience. His sermon was an attempt to prove that all the prophecies in regard to rebuilding Jerusalem, pointed with unerring accuracy to the deeds of the Latter-day saints. When he finally prophesied the subjugation of all nations to the Mormon power, and closed by saying, "I believe these things. They are in the Bible. If this be treason, indict the Bible and not me. I speak for myself. Others can speak for themselves;" the implied threat was followed by an ominous burst of applause. The three thousand Gentile residents of the city, the great majority of whom are engaged in developing the immensely rich mines of this region, seem to anticipate little or no trouble, but meanwhile rumors of writs and indictments fill the air. Camp Douglas, the guns of which command the whole city, is being reinforced, and the whole Mormon population seems to be buying arms and ammunition. Every day men, women and children carrying muskets or rifles, pass our hotel, and the gun-shops are always full. It seems impossible, however, that the Mormon leaders, shrewd as they have always shown themselves to be, would risk a collision with the Government on any pretext, when an overwhelming force of troops could be concentrated here so quickly by means of the railroads. Force is needless to insure the extinction of the delusion. The influence of Gentiles, aided by the differing sects in the Church itself, and the open infidelity of very many young people here, will ere long control affairs politically, and thus make Mormonism a mere sect; while to exist, it must be "aut Cæsar, aut nullus."

We leave here Wednesday for the John Day basin, in Oregon. Our route is by stage for six hundred miles from Kelton, on the Central Pacific, through City of Rocks and Boise City to Cañon City. We stop over, on the way, at the Great Shoshone Falls. After a four weeks' trip near Cañon City, we take a steamer at the Dalles, on the Columbia River, and go thence by water to San Francisco, which we hope to reach soon after the middle of November, three weeks in California will end the trip.

BOSTON LITERARY MATTERS.

Notable Books Preparing for the Holidays—Representative American Work—Facsimile and Art—Bret Harte's Poems—"The Stage Driver's Story"—Books Soon to be Published.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BOSTON, Saturday, Oct. 14, 1871.

The energies of the leading Boston publishers are now concentrated upon books to be published for the holidays, and the indications are that the result of their work will be in every way creditable to the country as well as this city. One house is engaged upon over a dozen books, and another on nearly as many. Two of the most noteworthy will be large illustrated quartos, which are expected to exhibit without as well as within, in binding and printing as well as in the drawings and engravings, the best workmanship of the country and the highest American art. There are to be twelve pictorial illustrations of EDWIN BOOTH'S characters in tragedy and comedy, drawn by the noted artist W. J. HENNESSY from life, and engraved by the well-known and appreciated W. J. LINTON, with a biographical and critical sketch of the actor, by Mr. WINTER, one of the best known of dramatic writers, and one of the most careful critics in your City, and BRET HARTE'S most popular sketches—"The Luck of Roaring Camp," "The Outcasts of Poker Flat," "Tennessee's Partner," "Miggles," "The Idyl of Red Gulch," and "Brown of Calaveras," with page illustrations by SOL EYTINGE, Jr. Both of these books are to be printed on heavy tinted paper, and within boldly red-lined pages. Among others to be brought out by the same house are a complete edition of LONGFELLOW'S Poems, illustrated by nearly three hundred illustrations from entirely new electrotype plates, an 8 vo. volume—the first American illustrated edition of the poet's complete works; WHITTIER'S new collection of poetry for children, to be called Child-Life and to be introduced by an original essay by him; BRET HARTE'S poems, illustrated; and J. T. TROWBRIDGE'S famous "Coupon-Bonds" and other Atlantic stories, illustrated. The other house referred to is engaged on fully as fine and valuable work. A superb book will be MORITZ RETZSCH'S Outlines to Shakespeare, a series of over a hundred delicate and very beautiful outline drawings illustrating "Hamlet," "Macbeth," "Romeo and Juliet," "King Lear," "The Tempest," "Othello," "King Henry IV.," and "The Merry Wives of Windsor," with explanatory text. The book will be an oblong folio, elegantly bound. Another will be the last work of the lamented PAUL KONEWKA, twenty designs in silhouette illustrating Falstaff and his Companions. It will have an introduction by HERMANN KURZ, and explanatory text selected from Shakespeare. And a third will be PHILIP GILBERT HAMERTON'S Unknown River, with thirty or forty illustrations sketched from nature by Mr. HAMERTON while canoeing along this "unknown river," the French River Loire, in his own uniquely-constructed boat, and camping on its shores and banks. Mr. HAMERTON will be recognised as the author of A Painter's Camp and Thoughts About Art.

REPRODUCTIONS FROM THE ENGLISH.

By the side, properly, of the elaborate books under way, mentioned above, should be placed two or three English books, which are to be reproduced in this country from this city. One is The Sermon on the Mount, illuminated and beautifully chromo-lithographed; and there is Lord HOUGHTON'S pretty child's poem, Good Night and Good Morning, with illuminations and etchings on copper, by WALTER SEVERN; and another is Illustrations of the Coast of Norway, a very large handsome flat volume. Good Night and Good Morning is an exquisite thing. Each verse of the poem is set within a brilliant illuminated border, and the etchings are made by ELIJAH WALTON, F. G. S., and descriptive text by F. G. BONNEY, of St. John's College, Cambridge, from notes taken during an expedition along that comparatively new field to artists and literati, especially for this work. The two have been before on like expeditions, and have published two volumes besides this—Flowers from the Upper Alps and Peaks and Valleys of the Alps. The former was reproduced in America during the last holidays.

BOOKS TO BE PUBLISHED THIS MONTH.

Prominent among the books to be published this month are LONGFELLOW'S translation of DANTE, comprising "The Inferno," "The Purgatorio" and "The Paradiso;" HAWTHORNE'S American Note Books; MRS. BROWN'S Oldtown Fireside Stories, with illustrations by HOPPIN and other artists; CLARENCE KING'S Mountaineering in the Sierra Nevada; Bits of Travel, by HELEN HUNT; Words of Washington, collected and arranged by the inexhaustible JARED PARTON; a volume of poems by WILLIAM ALLEN BUTLER; CHRISTINA G. ROSSETTI'S new nursery rhyme book, appropriately called Sing-Song; English Lessons for English People, the joint work of Prof. BAILEY, author of Rose Home, and FRANCIS ABBOTT, M. A., of the London schools, a text-book in advanced schools and colleges, and at the same time an assistant to professional writers and students; Rev. C. A. BARTOL'S Rondel Faith; Ones from All Quarters, by FRANCIS JACOX, a book of annotations on miscellaneous subjects, with original matter in the form of essays; and a new George Sand, The Crime of Monsieur Antoine.

BRET HARTE'S POEMS.

Also to be published very soon are BRET HARTE'S poems, which have been collected and arranged under the title of Poems of the East and West. The book is to include every poem of note that Mr. HARTE has written, minding several that are not known in this section of the country, and a few new ones. Among the former is the following:

THE STAGE-DRIVER'S STORY.

BY BRET HARTE.

It was the stage-driver's story, as he stood with
His back to the wheelers,
Quietly feeking his whips and turning his quid
of tobacco;
While on the dusty road, and blent with the rays
of the moonlight,
We saw the lash of his whip and the juice of tobacco descending.

"Danger! sir, I believed you—indeed, I may say
on that subject.
You your existence might put to the hazard and future of a wager.
I have seen dagos! Oh, no! notme, sir, indeed,
I assure you;
Perchance 'twas the man with the dog that is sitting alone in you wagon.

It was the Geiger Grade, a mile and a half from the summit:
Black as your hat was the night, and never a star in the heavens.
Thundering down the grade, the gravel and stones we sent flying
Over the precipice side—a thousand feet plumb to the bottom.

Half-way down the grade I felt, Sir, a thrilling and creaking,
Then a lurch to one side, as we hung on the bank of the ravine;
Looking up the road, I saw, in the distance
behind me,
The off hind-wheel of the coach just loosed from its axle, and following.

One glance above I gave, then gathered together
my ribbons,
Shouted, and flung them, outspread, on the straining necks of my cattle;
Screamed at the top of my voice, and lashed the air in my frenzy,
While down the Geiger Grade, on three wheels,
the vehicle thundered.

Speed was our only chance, when again came the ominous rattle:
Crack, and another wheel slipped away, and was lost in the darkness.
Two only now were left; yet such was our fearful momentum,
Upright, erect, and sustained on two wheels,
the vehicle thundered.

As some huge boulder, unloosed from its rocky shelf on the mountain,
Drives before it the hare and the timorous squirrel, far-leaping,
So down the Geiger Grade rushed the pioneer
coach, and before it
Leaped the wild horses, and shrieked in advance of the danger stupendous.

But to be brief in my tale. Again, ere we came to the level,
Slipped from its axle a wheel; so that, to be plain in my statement,
We traveled upon one wheel, until we drove up to the station.

Then, Sir, we sank in a heap; but picking myself from the ruins,
I heard a noise up the grade, and, looking, I saw in the distance
The three wheels following still, like moons on the horizon whirling.
Till, circling, they gracefully sank on the road
at the side of the station.

This is my story, Sir; a trifle, indeed, I assure you.
Mean more, perchance, might be said; but I hold him, of all men, most ligotly
Who deserves the forth in the tale. No, thank you!—Well, since you are pressing,
Perhaps I don't care if I do; you may give me
the same, Jim—no sugar."

A NEW LIBRARY OF NOVELS.

The publication of a series of the most readable and the best of new English and American novels, and translations from the leading German and French authors, has just been, with the intention of forming a library of popular novels. These are to appear once a week, and occasionally are to be illustrated. The series begins with the publication of Joshua Marvel, by R. L. PARTON, and Grif, a story of Australian life, by the same: The Story of Valentine, by ARTHUR SKETCHLEY; One Loss, by ISABEL BARNES BURRINGTON; Leonora, by KATHERINE SEDGWICK VALERIO, and Kate Beaumont, by J. W. DE FOREST, will follow. It will be called "Osgood's Library of Novels."

CURRENT NOTES.

On the third trial of Mrs. CLEM, charged with the murder of Mr. and Mrs. YOUNG, in Indianapolis, the jury has disagreed.

The total receipts of the State of Louisiana from Dec. 1, 1870, to Sept. 30, 1871, were $5,441,343 83. The expenditures in the same time amounted to $6,465,575 36.

Congressmen CHARLES ST. JOHN and R. H. DUELL, of this State, who have been ill for some time, are now both recovering. Judge DUELL is able to attend to business again.

The total number of deaths at Cedar Keys, Fla., from yellow fever has been ten, and there have been no deaths for two weeks. All but about a dozen of its population of 200 have fled from the place.

Last Sunday, near the Infirmary of Jefferson County, Ohio, a little crippled boy named JOHNNY PARSONS was buried alive by two boys aged respectively five and nine, and was taken out dead several hours afterward.

The Cleveland Leader denies the telegraphic report that all the Cleveland insurance companies have gone by the board. It says that some of them are heavy losers, but nearly all declare their ability to meet their losses and continue business.

Miss LILLIE PECKHAM, well known as a public lecturer throughout the country, died in Milwaukee, Wis., after a long illness, on the 14th. She had determined to enter the ministry, and intended to apply this Fall for admission to the Cambridge Divinity School.

ROBERT DENMAN, the prisoner who at the convict outbreak from the Nevada Prison fought so bravely on the side of the authorities, and by his intrepidity and coolness saved the life of Lieut.-Gov. DENVER, has been pardoned. He was sentenced in 1866 to imprisonment for life for murder in the second degree.

A letter from Chicago says that in St. James' Church, on the first floor, were two gilded tablets, erected to the memory of gallant brothers who fell in the battles of the rebellion. The church was entirely destroyed, the walls crumbling and falling, and cinders only remaining of the handsome furniture within. But the record of brave deeds by godly men is the light for freedom remained intact. The tablets were left standing, and seem not to have been scorched.

WILLIAM R. SCOTT was found guilty of manslaughter in Lawrence, Mass., last week, after a two days' trial before a jury. It is a queer case. Several months ago SCOTT and Miss EMMA C. HORN, two forlorn lovers, went out to a park in Lawrence one evening, and there each took a dose of poison. They lay all night in an insensible condition; in the morning SCOTT revived, gave the alarm, and Miss HORN was taken to her home, where she soon died. It was proved that the girl of her own will took the poison and induced SCOTT to do the same, but the poison was purchased by SCOTT.

Dr. HENRY C. PERKINS, of Newburyport, Mass., reports that on Monday evening, Oct. 9, with the aid of a refracting telescope of five inches aperture, he had a glimpse of ENCKE'S comet near the star Mirach in Andromeda; and also, on the next morning about 4½ o'clock, of TUTTLE'S comet, near the star Iota in the Great Bear. Both comets were faint, and in the places assigned them by calculation. He thinks both comets will be visible to the naked eye some weeks hence, ENCKE'S in the evening and TUTTLE'S in the morning.

The Mobile Register is insisting upon SEMMES' right to the title of "Admiral," and says: "He is not even an 'ex-Admiral, as some would have it. He was paroled as a Confederate Admiral, and his parole has never been annulled. He might be shot for an offense for which an inferior in rank would be only reprimanded or imprisoned. He is at this moment held under disabilities for offences against the United States committed as 'Admiral,' and the same authority that prolongs the punishment perpetuates the rank."

The arrest and punishment of the two Indian chiefs seems to have had the effect of bringing the Kiowas to a sense of their evil doing. Since the arrest of SANTANTA they have been returning the stolen stock to the commander of Fort Sill, and lately KICKING BIRD, one of their chiefs, made a statement to the effect that they wanted to cease raiding upon the white people, and begged the commander to write "a strong appeal to the officers at Washington for the release of SANTANTA and BIG TREE, who have now suffered enough."

Mayor MASON, of Chicago, is a Massachusetts man, born and bred in Berkshire County. He was educated a civil engineer, was connected with the building of the Rensselaerville Railroad, was chief engineer of the New-York and New-Haven Railroad during its construction, and has always maintained a high character for integrity in all trusts committed to his keeping. Ex-Mayor BIGGS, of Bethlehem, Pa., who has known him for twenty-five years, says of him: "I can say that I never heard his honesty questioned. He has always been a man of sterling worth

THE WORK OF REFORM.

What the Friends of Good Government are Doing.

A Report From the Committee of Seventy to be Made Soon.

Important Disclosures Forthcoming Implicating the Ring Leaders.

Active Measures to be Immediately Taken.

Further Evidences of Corruption in the City Government.

Preparations on Both Sides for the Coming Election.

What the Committees are Doing.

The Subcommittees have been compelled to bring their investigations to a close. "If we should go on," said Mr. WM. A. BOOTH to a TIMES reporter yesterday, "we would never get through. Every day starts some new discovery of fraud, and if we should follow up everything that turns up, we should never have any report at all." For that reason the Court-house report will be finished immediately, probably by the middle of this week, and the report on printing frauds will be presented shortly afterward. There are some other minor matters which will be pushed until these more important affairs are concluded, and then all the reports will be submitted to the Joint Committee. The Committee on Printing and Stationery has toiled against the most discouraging disadvantages. Much of the stationery was furnished two years ago, and has been almost wholly consumed. The effect of this is to prevent examination by experts, and the ascertaining of the actual value of the material for which such immense amounts have been appropriated and paid. Added to this is the refusal of a majority of the contractors who furnished the goods to make any statements calculated to lighten the labor of the Committee. They are satisfied that the "printing and stationery" provided for New-York have played no small part in the impoverishing of the City; but, obstructed as they are, they find it difficult to reduce the figures to what extent the Treasury has been robbed, under the cover of this simple veil. Accountants and experts are still engaged, and promise to complete their work as soon as the Court-house report is ready.

Mr. WM. A. BOOTH has prepared his report for the Committee of Sixteen to the Joint Committee, but at his request we refrain from giving any of its details to the public until it is adopted by the Committee for which it is intended. It is a summing up in general terms of all that has been accomplished by the Sub-committees with references to their reports. It throws a light as bright as the day upon the frauds that have sapped the strength of the City; it fastens conviction at last upon the thieves who have robbed the citizens, and abounds in many a significant hint for a rapid and rigid reform.

These reports, with the tabular statements of the discoveries of the accountants and experts, will, it is said, be given entire to the public this week, and we are permitted to assure our readers that even the beginning has not been told.

The Broadway Bank Disclosures.

Mr. SAMUEL J. TILDEN, on behalf of the Committee of Seventy, has concluded his examination of the books of the bank in reference to the City's accounts, and is now engaged in the preparation of his report thereon. The publication of this report will be looked forward to by the public with eagerness, and by the thieves of the Ring with fear. There have been grave difficulties to overcome in the tracing of the stolen money. The bills, certificates and vouchers in the Controller's office have been found apparently all right, and it was left to the books of the Ring's bank to find and fasten the men who have profited by the losses of the City. The forthcoming report of Mr. TILDEN will settle this, will set this and many other matters straight, and it is possible that the "Golden Circle" will find it necessary to devote more time hereafter to their own salvation and less to the annoyance of the Deputy Controller.

The Sinking Fund.

At a meeting of the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund, yesterday, the question of issuing dock bonds to the amount of $1,000,000 was renewed.

The Mayor asked the Deputy Controller whether he had any report to make on the subject.

Mr. GREEN said he had not considered the matter at all, and as the question had not been adjudicated upon by the Courts, he presumed the Board would not want to vote for the issue of the bonds.

The Mayor said he might want to vote for them, as he might not agree with the decision of the Court. However, as there was already a resolution to issue $800,000 of the bonds, nothing would be lost by laying the matter over.

The Board then adjourned to Monday next.

More Unpaid Laborers.

About twenty men, who have been at work in the lump and gas department of the Board of Public Works, applied at the Finance Department, yesterday, for their pay, which has been running for the last ten weeks. Later in the day the men were informed that their claims were under consideration, and an effort would be made to obtain the money for them.

Receipt of Taxes.

The books for taxes on real estate will, in all probability, be opened to-morrow morning. The receipts from personal taxes have been very light during the past two days.

The Common Council and the Coming Elections.

Great uncertainty appears to prevail as to whether there will be any election for Aldermen and Assistant Aldermen, in November next. By a late decision of the Court of Appeals, it seems that any law extending the term of an elective office is unconstitutional, and this agrees with the general opinion of the minor Courts on the subject. The present members of the Common Council, however, whose term was extended for one year, that is to the first Monday in January, 1872, contend that the law does not affect them, inasmuch as there is a provision in the charter by which, if they choose to resign at any time during the present year, they can be re-appointed by the Mayor. The Mayor says that, in any event, there is no warrant for the holding of an election for members of the Common Council during this year. So far no nominations for either Aldermen or Assistant Aldermen have been made by either of the great political parties.

Drilling the Laborers.

A rumor was prevalent in the City yesterday to the effect that the laborers at present occupied on the public parks and boulevards are undergoing a course of military drill, preparatory to any emergency that may arise at the coming election. The affair is conducted with the greatest possible secrecy, however, and the details are therefore almost unattainable. The men are pledged to keep the matter as quiet as possible and invariably preserve the strictest silence when questioned by an outsider. Still, however, the secret has oozed out at one of the convivial meetings held almost nightly by some of the laborers on their way from work. The Police profess ignorance of the matter, and are inclined to believe that there is no foundation for the statement.

The New Grand Jury—Address of Recorder Hackett—Indirect Allusion to the City Frauds—List of the Jurors.

The Court of General Sessions was more than usually crowded by spectators yesterday, attracted thither by the fact that the new Grand Jury, before which the cases of Mayor HALL and the alleged voucher thieves are likely to come, was to be impaneled. Shortly after 11 o'clock the Clerk commenced calling the panel of jurors, many of whom failed to respond to their names. Among them was EUGENE A. HEATH, the partner of INGERSOLL in the manufacture of the lamps which are now used in the parks and public squares. LORIN INGERSOLL, who answered to his name when the panel was first called on the 2d inst., appeared yesterday and got excused. He is the father of the great Ring chair-maker. The name of ARCHIBALD HALL, Jr., the man who drew enormous amounts from the City for painting the new Court-house, originally appeared on the list, but was withdrawn, at his own request, on the 2d inst. Subjoined is a list of the persons who were sworn, yesterday, to serve as Grand Jurors:

Foreman, GEORGE J. FORBES, Vice-President, No. 78 Broad-street.

FRANCIS M. BIXBY, merchant, No. 409 Greenwich-street.

RALPH BOGART, trunks, No. 369 Hudson-street.

EDWIN DUNNS, carpets, No. 128 West Thirty-third-street.

DAVID FORCHHEIMER, hats, No. 473 Broadway.

WM. M. FLIESS, No. 47 Broadway.

CHARLES E. HARTSHORNE, manufacturer, No. 119 Walker-street.

MARCELLUS HARTLEY, guns, No. 57 West Thirtieth-street.

CHAS. H. HASWELL, No. 703 West Forty-fifth-street.

RICHARD HEATHER, coal, No. 130 West Thirty-second-street.

WM. H. HARBECK, merchant, No. 21 Beaver-street.

JUDSON HASKEL, grocer, No. 189 East Eighty-sixth-street.

WILLIAM F. HASKIN, jeweler, No. 239 Fourth-avenue.

FREDERICK HABENSHAW, merchant, No. 113 Maiden-lane.

EUGENE J. JACKSON, No. 58 Exchange-place.

D. H. JONES, wines, No. 97 Beaver-street.

GEO. KUSTER, No. 148 East Fourteenth-street.

ISAAC J. OLIVER, printer, No. 34 Park-row.

DANIEL O'CONOR, builder, No. 42 West Seventeenth-street.

D. W. O'HALLORAN, No. 16 East Broadway.

ZACHARIAH OPPENHEIM, No. 7 Gold-street.

WM. PALEN, hides, No. 66 Gold-street.

CHAS. G. ROSENBERG, artist, No. 249 East Fourteenth-street.

After the jury had taken the customary oath, Recorder HACKETT appointed Mr. GEORGE J. FORBES, an old Grand Juryman, to the responsible position of foreman of the body. There was some surprise that Mr. CHARLES H. HASWELL, who has heretofore served as foreman of Grand Juries, was not given the place.

In addressing the jury, Recorder HACKETT mentioned that they succeeded the Grand Jury discharged on Friday by Judge BARNARD, in the Oyer and Terminer. He said he knew of nothing at this time to which he wished to call their attention particularly, except to enumerate the laws, which he was required to do. He further said it might become, in the course of their session, his duty to call their attention to some grave matters which interested the community at large.

Another Panel of Grand Jurors.

Below is a list of Grand Jurors who were drawn yesterday, at the Court of Oyer and Terminer, before Judge BARNARD:

ANDREW L. ARMSTRONG, JOEL F. NAVARRO, JAMES S. BARROW, AUSTIN F. PRATT, JONAS L. PHILLIPS, No. 104 Broadway; OSCAR A. NATHUSIUS, No. 10 Division-street; JOHN H. DRAPER, auctioneer, No. 113 East Twenty-fifth-street; WILLIAM J. IVES, No. 74 Beaver-street; BENJ. R. VAN BUREN, No. 445 Sixth-avenue; SAMUEL N. BICKLY, President, No. 123 East Twenty-fourth-street; AMOS D. ASHMEAD, undertaker, No. 1,457 Third-avenue; ROWLAND S. DOTY, No. 69 Broadway; JAMES MASTERSON; EDWARD H. SEBRON, undertaker, No. 64 Downing-street; JOSEPH BLUM, No. 236 Bowery; FRANK A. RANDOW, liquors, No. 189 Bleecker-street; ORRIN WARD, furniture, No. 71 Spring-street; WAYNE H. RHODES, builder, No. 236 West Fourth-street; GEORGE S. SEAMAN, No. 48 Broadway; BENJAMIN J. WENDEL, No. 21 Old-slip; LOUIS BAGLEY, merchant, No. 70 Broad-street; SAMUEL W. ANDREWS, No. 23 West Forty-third-street; WM. B. DINSMORE, No. 49 Broadway; DANIEL S. COHEN, merchant, No. 193 Broadway; SAMUEL W. GREY, grocer, No. 1,900 Broadway; THOMAS W. KNOX, Avenue House; THOMAS DUSLAP, No. 236 West Thirty-first-street; DE GRASSE LIVINGSTON, No. 121 Fifth-avenue; HENRY SMITH, No. 300 Mulberry-street; PETER LORILLARD, No. 16 Chambers-street; WASHINGTON MCKENZIE, No. 65 East Nineteenth-street; EDWARD PHALON, No. 577 Broadway; ERNST STEIGER, No. 22 Franklin-street; JAMES ANTHONY, No. 123 Franklin-street; JOHN JASPER, Seventy-fourth-street and Tenth-avenue; WILLIAM H. VANDERBILT, Vice-President, No. 459 Ninth-avenue; JOHN E. ANDREW, No. 169 Fifth-avenue; HENRY SIMPSON, grocer, No. 122 Bleecker-street; WILSON SMALL, No. 205 Henry-street; WILLIAM SCHAUS, prints, No. 149 Broadway; C. W. MCALLISTER, No. 653 Second-avenue; LUCIUS S. COMSTOCK, No. 12 Vesey-street; DAVID V. FREEMAN, Treasurer Excise Board, No. 442 West Twenty-third-street; JOHN B. AYRES, No. 25 Beekman-street; ALEXANDER MASON, No. 463 Hudson-street; JEREMIAH QUINLAN, No. 199 William-street; PATRICK MALONE, No. 9 Ninth-avenue; JAMES KERVE, No. 337 East Forty-first-street.

Report of Court Attendants.

Deputy Controller GREEN yesterday addressed a circular to the Judges of the Supreme, Superior and Marine Courts, the Common Pleas and General Sessions, requesting them to direct the Court Clerk, or some other proper person, to report to him daily the attendance during the prescribed hours, of the officers of said Courts; such officers having received their appointment from the Department of Finance, are by law responsible to that Department for the performance of their duties.

Further Payments to Laborers.

The payment of the laborers on the work of alteration of the aqueduct, which was commenced on Saturday, was continued yesterday by Mr. A. S. CADY, of the Controller's office, under direction of Deputy Controller GREEN, and about 500 more men were paid. The money for these payments, as has been previously stated, was furnished by the Committee of Banks, at the request of the Deputy Controller.

Parity of Elections—Proposed Demonstration.

It is said that a movement is now on foot to call another meeting at the Cooper Union, and to there make arrangements for a general suspension of business for one day and a parade of a committee of at least 5,000 persons, who will march down Broadway to the City Hall, and there demand of the Mayor that he will guarantee such safeguards as will secure an honest count of the vote of the November election.

Council of Political Reform—Address to the Citizens of the Seventeenth Ward.

The Council of Political Reform of the Seventeenth Ward have issued an address calling upon the citizens of the Ward to vote for men who shall be above corruption and selfish motives. The object of the Council is to organize all opposed to the "Ring" and its iniquities into one solid phalanx and hurl them against the common enemy. The address concludes as follows:

But we shall not fail if we are true to ourselves. Every circumstance favors us. The disclosures commencing with the publications in the TIMES have thrown the Ring into confusion. Thousands, if we make the proper effort, who have not voted for years, can be brought to the polls to vote with us, and other thousands who have heretofore acted with the Ring, have deserted, or are deserting, the sinking ship. Join with us in our Council, fellow-citizens, and let us work unitedly together, to the end that no member of the Ring may much longer retain the office he now holds, and that no one in any way tainted with the contagion of these corrupt men shall be elected.

BENJAMIN TAYLOR, President; Henry A. Burr, George Hepburn Jr., Vice-Presidents; Thomas J. M. Adriance, Treasurer; William Johnston, Jr., secretary.

Wm. H. Falconer, Stephen Cutter, Henry N. Beers, Jeremiah Johnson, A. Barry, M. D., Robert Hartshorne, Joseph M. Omeis, John A. Foley, Robert McMurray, M. D., Richard H. Bowne, Philip J. Seiter, Chas. G. Wakely, J. S. Mosell, M. D., Geo. Washburn, Hiram Mierke, Fred'k W. Niemann, J. W. Hawes, Joseph Heine, M. D., Homer Baldwin, Geo. H. Boyce.

A Modification of the Injunction Asked for by the Commissioner of Public Works.

The Commissioner of Public Works yesterday applied to the Supreme Court for a modification of the injunction granted by that Court in the suit of JOHN FOLEY, plaintiff, against the Board of Supervisors of the County of New-York, the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of the City of New-York, A. OAKEY HALL, RICHARD B. CONNOLLY, WILLIAM M. TWEED, and PETER B. SWEENY, defendants.

The following is one of the affidavits filed with the appeal:

City and County of New-York, ss.: EDWARD H. TRACY, being sworn, says that he is a chief engineer of the Croton Aqueduct, and that he was employed as an engineer in the original construction of the Aqueduct from 1838 to the completion in 1842, and thereafter till 1853, in the capacity of Assistant Engineer, resident, and chief engineer. He then resigned his position, and was not connected with the works till May, 1870, when he was again appointed chief engineer, which appointment, his experience in this service, has become familiar with all the works of the Croton Aqueduct, including the structures, mains and reservoirs, and with the Croton River and its tributaries, and its water-sheds. When the Water-works first came into use in July, 1842, the quantity of water delivered in the City was about 18,000,000 gallons per day. The quantity was increased in 1848 to 36,000,000 gallons per day. Since 1848 the quantity required for the use of the City has been increasing, and during the last twelve months the aqueduct has delivered into the City 85,000,000 gallons per day. The daily flow of the Croton River, during the driest part of a dry season, does not exceed 30,000,000 gallons per day. For a part of the year the flow of the river is much greater than is required to supply the daily demands upon it. Hence the necessities of ample reservoirs for the storage of water in times of the dry season. All the reservoirs within the limits of this City have an aggregate capacity for furnishing a daily supply for not more than two weeks. All the storage reservoirs on the Croton River, previous to May, 1870, had an aggregate capacity of 500,000,000 of gallons, being about six days' supply for the City. A new and capacious storage reservoir on the west branch of the Croton River, has been commenced, and the process of constructing it has been continued till this time. It is yet unfinished and incapable of being used; but the work upon it has been pushed forward unremittingly in hope of having it ready by the Spring of 1872, so as to commence filling it with the Spring rains of that year. During the dry Summer of 1868, the City narrowly escaped a water famine, and was under the necessity of having its supply from the Croton aqueduct further cut down. This caused serious inconvenience in many parts of the City. In the Spring of 1870, in order to guard against the consequences of another drouth, vigorous measures were taken to procure an accessory supply of water by drawing down natural lakes in the Valley of the Croton. It became necessary in some cases to purchase or lease the lakes and to draw down the level of the water; and purchases and leases were made accordingly. The drouth which followed immediately afterward was so severe and continued, that but for those lakes the City would have been in daily destitute of water. As a large part of the City during all that drouth the City was abundantly supplied with pure water from these lakes. This process will not bear frequent repetition; for some of these lakes, after withdrawal, will not refill. Dams constructed to retain the water have not yet filled up to their natural level. It is, therefore, absolutely necessary, in the wise administration of this service, that the construction of the reservoir now under way on the west branch should be vigorously prosecuted and brought to a speedy completion, and that additional storage reservoirs be constructed. The cost of such construction is fully provided for by the terms of the law in pursuance of the act of May 27, 1871, chapter 16, section 4. When the present system of main-pipes was laid, it was abundant for the wants of the City at that time, but no new mains have been laid to supply the supply below Fourteenth-street since 1848. In the meantime, the City below Fourteenth-street has greatly increased in population, and the demand for water has increased in a much greater ratio above Fourteenth-street. Formerly, thirty gallons a day to an inhabitant was an abundant supply; now the requirements are eighty-five gallons to an inhabitant per day. With the present mains, therefore, many parts of the City below Canal-street, the water rises only to the first story during the day time, where it formerly rose to the third or fourth floor of the dwelling. The number of fire hydrants is thus greatly diminished, and in case of a conflagration of great extent, the present mains cannot be relied on to furnish a sufficient supply of water for the emergency. To remedy this defect, it has been proposed to lay a 36-inch main from Forty-second-street to Chambers-street, there to connect with existing mains, but not to be tapped by branches on the way down, which will insure a full supply of water in case of the great emergency, and will also relieve the head of water to its former standard height. Much of the pipes laid been made and delivered, the rest are in process of manufacture, and a portion of the pipes already laid. The work of laying is still going on, and arrangements are made to lay the pipes as rapidly as they can be made and delivered by two of the largest pipe foundries in the United States, which are now engaged in their manufacture. The funds to pay for this work are to be provided for by the issue of bonds, in pursuance of the act of April 27, 1870, chapter 384, section 3. In many parts of the City north of Fourteenth-street there is a defect in the system of main-pipes, which now causes serious inconvenience in many places. Many of the pipes are too small for the present wants, and they are not sufficiently connected for the proper circulation of the water requisite to insure it being delivered in a pure state wherever it is needed. In numerous places, where it now entirely fails, it is necessary, no pipes at all have been laid in the street. Many entire blocks of ground, upon all parts of which houses now going up, were entirely without water on the 1st of May last, and applications are constantly coming in for the laying of pipes in streets now destitute of water, where buildings are now erecting or under contracts for erection. It is clear that the mains and pipes should be so extended as to reach all parts of the City as fast as built up and such is the reasonable expectation of builders. The islands in the East River, on which the City institutions are situated, rely entirely on the Croton aqueduct for their supply of water, which is carried there in iron pipes laid across the bottom of the rivers. Such pipes are liable to injury from various causes, and many of the older ones are of perishable materials. It has been necessary during the past season to replace three separate lines of those pipes, and additional work of the same kind is already required. For this branch of the service, to extend the distribution of the Croton water,

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

KING ARTHUR. A Poem. By Lord LYTTON. New-York: HARPER BROTHERS.

The reproduction of a book after a quarter of a century, which at its first publication met with but meagre success, is a decided anomaly in literature. When, however, this is done by an author of such repute as Lord LYTTON, the action involuntarily draws much the same kind of admiration that is bestowed on the leader of a "forlorn hope"—since the neediest, should the book chance to receive it, will be infinitely more intolerable than on the first occasion. The author of King Arthur seems to be fully conscious of this fact, and in part to anticipate it, for he says in his prefatory remarks:

"Whatever worth I have put into this work of mine, comprising in condensed form so many of the influences which a life divided between literature and action—the study of books and the commerce of mankind—brings to bear upon the two elements of song, Imagination and Thought, must degree of worth must ultimately be found in it, and its merits and its faults be ranged by different standards of criticism from those which experience teaches me to anticipate now. I shall be, indeed, beyond the reach of pleasure or of pain in a judgement thus cardily pronounced. But he who appeals to Time must not be impatient of the test that he invites."

From the structure and merits of Lord LYTTON's poem, it is impossible that it should meet with the present success it deserves. The allegorical meaning, running through the entire plan, is too deeply hidden for the general reader; and, although the surface abounds with descriptive scenes, written in a style which, for sweetness and beauty, cannot be too highly commended, yet even these are wanting in that element which insures to books such as Don Quixote a permanent reading. All this, however, does not detract from its inherent worth; and, if Lord LYTTON desires no more than its perpetuity, there is every reason to think that the hope thus cherished will be fulfilled.

On account of its composite character it is impossible to give an outline sketch of the poem that will convey to the reader any adequate idea of it; for while the story is told after the romantic style, it shadows forth, not only the development of an heroic character in the individual, but the structural growth of the nation in whose historical records its hero figures. In the former of these three parts which alone can be treated, the poet does not accept the traditional accounts of King ARTHUR with which we are so familiar through the poems of Mr. TENNYSON. He claims that these stories of the Round Table, which were taken "out of earlyen bookes of Frenche and redneed into Englyshe," by Sir THOMAS MALORY, betray on their face their French origin. With the exception of proper names he therefore allows his fancy to weave the substance of the story into a more national cast, so that with him neither is Lancelot false, nor Genevieve frail.

The scene opens in the gardens near the town of Carduel, the capital of Arthur's Kingdom, where the young King is feasting with his courtiers. From these festivities he is summoned by a spirit, and, with the aid of Merlin, learns that in order to save his country he must, within a year, find "the falchion welded from a single gem," the silver shield in which the war-god Thor, when an infant, was cradled, and "the child-guide with golden hair." The King instantly departed on his mission, in pursuing which he is directed by a white dove, which flies over in the direction he should take.

In his journeyings he visits a secret valley in the Alps, where a remnant of the ancient Etrurian nation dwells, from the description of which the following is taken:

"Before them, at the distance, o'er the blue
Of the sweet waves that girt the roseate isle,
Flinging light's prism upon the uproven olives thro':
Remotest, walled and moated, in the white,
Floated the hum of voices, and the sweet
Lutes chimed with timbrels to dim-glancing feet.

The calm scene rests on the breathless glass
Of dreamy waters, and the snow-white steer
Wear the supine margin motionless
Stead; here deep, gazing wistful on its clear
And life-like shadow, shimmering deep and far,
Where on the lucid darkness 'all the star.'"

But from this very delightful retreat the voice of duty calls him, and having found the sword, he is led by the dove to the Arctic regions, and finds the shield in the depths of an extinct volcano. But the crowning task, the finding of the child-guide, is accomplished in the discovery that the dove he has followed so faithfully is the disembodied spirit of Genevieve, daughter of his enemy, the Saxon King, whom, after she has resumed her earthly form, he marries, and thus secures a lasting peace. Gawaine, Caradoc and Lancelot each have tasks to perform in aid of their King, in executing which they meet with adventures peculiar to the temperament of each. The conclusion is not an unhappy one, as is generally the case in King Arthur's story, for the poem ends with his success, and, having brought him and his friends to Carduel, says:

"What gallant deeds in gentle hat were done,
What lutes made joyounce sweet in jasmine bowers,
Let others tell.—Slow sets the Summer sun;
Now falls the mist, and, gloomy, droop the flowers;
Faint in the gloaming dies the vesper bell,—
And Dream-land sleeps round golden Carduel."

It may be well to add, as the merit is fast growing to be exceptional, that the thoughts inculcated throughout the poem are as pure and true as the rhythm of the verse in which they are written.

The following lines, taken from the adventures of Sir Gawaine have few equals in the English language:

"Then boldly out into the blissful air
Sir Gawaine stepp'd: How solemn-sweet was night!
With Ocean's heart of music heaving there,
Under its starry robe—and all the night
Of sea and shore, and isles deluge-riven,
Distinctly dark against the instrous heavens.

Calm lay the large ride Nature of the North,
Glad as when first the stars rejoiced a-sang,
And fresh as when from kindling Chaos forth,
A thought of God, the young Creation sprang;
When man in all the present Father found,
And for the Temple, paused and looked around.

Nature, thou earliest gospel of the wise;
Thou never-silent hymner unto God;
Thou Angel-ladder lost amid the skies,
Tho' at the foot we dream upon the sod;
To thee the Priesthood of the Lyre belong—
They hear Religion and reply in Song.

If he hath held they worship undefiled
Through all the sins and sorrows of his youth,
Let the Man echo what he heard as Child
From the fair harpings of melodious Truth.
Let the sad troubled hearts whose inarticulate tone
Sweek with the solace thou hast given his own."

THE BOOK OF THE EAST AND OTHER POEMS. By RICHARD HENRY STODDARD. Boston: JAMES R. OSGOOD & Co.

This little volume of poems takes its name from a collection of Persian, Tartar, Arab and Chinese songs, which form but an inconsiderable part of the entire work. The remaining portion of the book is filled by sixty or more short poems on miscellaneous subjects; many of which have previously been published in the current literature of the day. That Mr. STODDARD has a birthright claim to write in verse, no one will care to deny, after having read "Mere Victam," "The Children of Isis," and a score of others, beside those comprehended under the general title, almost all of which are of a very high order. In many of the latter he has given expression to the glowing intensity of the Eastern world—freed from the modern affectation of seemlessness—to a degree rarely if ever excelled. It is to poems of this character, or to those in a historic vein, that Mr. STODDARD must look for his ultimate success as a poet. He has in the present volume introduced many elements that will go far to counteract the favorable opinion his readers might form of him. If we are not greatly mistaken, Mr. STODDARD, since the publication of his first book, has lost the faith he had in much that the world holds sacred; and instead of gathering strength with those

"That after toil and storm Seem to have reached a purer air,"

he has sunk into a state of morbid distrust and apprehension which is all the more painful because it lacks consistency. In certain parts, notably the "New Christmas Carol," he proclaims loudly and almost in tones of defiance his adherence to the most orthodox of religious beliefs. Yet other poems indicate a hopelessness as to the future, and an absolute fear of physical dissolution, that is utterly unworthy of him. If Mr. STODDARD claimed to be no more than an exponent of the thoughts and feelings of the great mass of people with whom he is thrown in contact, this might be permissible, but he has in another place given a canon by which a poet may be judged; which is that he is one

"Not losing heart, nor hating hope,
When prisew faith is dim."

But beyond this it must be said that at the present time, when types of calm resignation to whatever may come, are to be found in thousands of men from TENNYSON and SWINBURNE downward, as well as on the other hand, strong religious faith, the public exposure of personal doubts and fears which, as they progress, appear to grow only the more dense, exhibits a pitiable, but unpardonable, weakness.

As we above said, the love poems and songs in this book form its chief attraction, and can be highly commended alike for their delicate beauty and purity. The following short one, which is all we have room to give, is taken indiscriminately from a large number equally good:

Tell me, what's my love like?
A lily of the May,
That does not mind the rising sun,
Yet keeps its dew all day?
Yes, and no.
Fond is she, and coy is she,
But—whisper low—
She is more than this to me,
So no lily shall she be.

But tell me what's my love like?
A little cooing dove,
Who lives in your heart her safest nest,
A thing of Fear and love?
Yes, and no.
Timid she and tender she,
But—whisper low—
She is more than this to me,
So no dove my love shall be.

Oh, tell me, what's my love like?
Perhaps a pearl of girls,
For whose sweet face a king would place
His crown upon her curls?
Yes, and no.
Worthy a king is she,
But—whisper low—
She is more, and is for me,
So no queen my dear shall be.

NAST'S ILLUSTRATED ALMANAC FOR 1872. New-York: HARPER & BROTHERS.

Mr. NAST's vigorous pencil has been employed to good purpose in this little Almanac. No fewer than 130 illustrations are in fact credited to it, and certainly many of these give unmistakably signs of their paternity. The non-political character of the Almanac will gain for it acceptance with those who may not relish the artist's trenchant pictorial attacks upon current abuses, and the fact that it is a clear and well-arranged chronicle of the coming year commends it to all. Further than this the letter press is decidedly worth reading; and it will be owned that this is unlikely to be hyperbolic praise when we explain that WM. M. THACKERAY, CHARLES DICKENS, JOHN HAY, JOSH BILLINGS, MARK TWAIN, P. V. NASBY, and other accepted humorists supply the text. Many of the pictures are very amusing, and the whole publication is neatly and cleverly put together. Nast's Illustrated Almanac will doubtless be eagerly sought, and, as it has genuine utility as well as humor to recommend it, we trust it will have a wide circulation.

HOW TO DO IT. By EDWARD EVERETT HALE. Boston: JAMES R. OSGOOD & Co.

DR. HALE has treated a terribly hackneyed subject, the social education of the young, not only in an entertaining manner, but with a pure hearty originality which is exceedingly refreshing. It is generally the case that there are no more stupid books published than those of the Perfect Gentleman class, which aim at burdening the mind with an infinite number of petty rules of propriety, which, if acted upon, would only produce a self-conscious imitator of politeness. The author of this little volume goes beyond the "what to do," and seeks by illustrating a few principles to build up in the mind of the youthful reader a basis of conviction, thus leading him to carry out spontaneously the courtesies of every-day life. The process by which these sentiments are enforced is inimitable, being in the peculiar style of the writer, which, though a trifle disconnected, makes full repayment by its profuseness in apt illustrations.

HISTORY OF ENGLAND. By BENSON J. LOSSING. New-York: G. P. PUTNAM & SONS.

The present volume forms one of a series of popular histories published by the Messrs. PUTNAM. The author claims to be merely a careful compiler of facts from the most recent sources of information, which, however, since the late disproval of the statements made by the writers during the reigns of the TUDORS concerning the previous dynasty, gives the book a position far in advance of those commonly used for school and family instruction. The style in which it is written is exceptionally lucid and entertaining, and the marginal references are in every way satisfactory.

A WOMAN'S PILGRIMAGE TO THE HOLY LAND. By Mrs. STEPHEN M. GRISWOLD. Hartford: J. B. BURR & HEYDE.

It seems difficult to convince some people that at the present time, when every one is more or less a traveler, the mere wish to publish certain not very original facts concerning a foreign country is not a sufficient excuse for adding one more to the immense surplus of books now existing. Mrs. GRISWOLD formed one of the Quaker City party, and thus, in writing her account, she has had the additional disadvantage of having to glean in a field which "Mark Twain" had already thoroughly harvested. The description of the voyage is very fairly told; but, as we have said above, the world would not have been greatly the loser if it had never been written.

THE LIFE OF REV. JOHN McVICKAR, S. T. D. By his son, WILLIAM A. McVICKAR, D. D. New-York: HURD & HOUGHTON.

The name of Dr. McVICKAR is intimately associated, in the minds of many of the residents of this City, with Columbia College, where he held the position of Professor for more than half a century. The above-named book gives an account of his life at that institution, his general clerical work, and selections from a diary kept by him while on a visit to Europe in 1830. The latter is exceedingly entertaining, as it contains a graphic description of the home-life of SOUTHEY, WORDSWORTH and SCOTT, and the curious condition of society in Paris at that period.

ODD HOURS OF A PHYSICIAN. By JOHN DAY. Philadelphia: J. B. LIPPINCOTT & CO.

There have been few works published within the last year that will prove more attractive to the general reader than the essays comprised under the above title. They treat very generally, and in an easily comprehended manner, of scientific questions, but could hardly be classed under that heading, as this feature is introduced only to illustrate subjects of popular interest. The author has had to aid him in his task a reading acquaintance, both wide and diversified, on which he has drawn with great liberality, but always with good effect.

HEALTH AND ITS CONDITIONS. By JAMES HINTON. New-York: G. P. PUTNAM & CO.

This work is one which embodies in a small space an infinite number of suggestions as to the laws regulating physical well-being. The anatomical descriptions are remarkably lucid, thus giving interest to an ordinarily dry subject. Perhaps the most original article is that on "Nursing as a Profession," in which the author, while urging the necessity of raising this branch to a higher level, advocates its regular adoption by women of culture as a means of support.

THE MISSION OF THE SPIRIT. By Rev. L. R. DUNN. New-York: CARLTON & LANAHAN.

It is undoubtedly the case, as the author of this book states, that the office and work of the Holy Ghost, as forming one of the Trinity, is very rarely brought to the mind of the ordinary Christian believer; he therefore takes the subject up in order to show that at the present time, though the claims of the Father and Son upon worship and faith are generally admitted, yet their work must be feeble as long as the agency of the spirit is ignored.

MISREAD PASSAGES OF THE SCRIPTURES. By J. BALDWIN BROWN, B. A. Second series. New-York: CARLTON & LANAHAN.

The success of the first volume has induced MR. BROWN to issue another work on this subject, which differs from the preceding, in that it is rather a commentary on, than a critical examination of the various disputed passages. The work is one of great merit, and is written in that earnest, scholarly manner common to a number of English writers on purely religious subjects, but so sadly wanting on this side of the Atlantic.

THE FABLES OF PILPAY. New-York: HURD & HOUGHTON.

This book is the revised edition of a collection of the oldest fables now in existence. They are of Sanscrit origin, but of so early a period that tradition is the only guide by which to determine their exact antiquity. The stories differ from those of Æsop in being connected one to the other throughout the book, and also in the preservation of the distinctive characteristics of the animals represented.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE ON FRACTURES AND DISLOCATIONS. By FRANK HASTINGS HAMILTON, M. D. Philadelphia: HENRY C. LEA. 1871.

This is the fourth edition of a work well known to the medical profession. Dr. HAMILTON, in issuing it, has taken into consideration the progress of knowledge in the diagnosis, pathology, and treatment of both fractures and dislocation; and while omitting in the revision much that the advance of time has rendered obsolete, has supplied its place with the more accurate and scientific experience of a later period.

STOLEN WATERS. By CELIA E. GARDNER. New-York: G. W. CARLTON & CO.

The work under this title consists of a poem which is evidently an imitation of OWEN MEREDITH'S Lucile. The general design, if the poem may be said to have any, is the unhappy affection of a young lady for the married tenor singer in her parish church. The persistency with which she clings to him until his wife is dispatched and he marries her, is diluted and spread out with doubtful taste, and in halting verse, over 300 pages.

DIATESSARON, THE LIFE OF OUR LORD IN THE WORDS OF THE GOSPELS. By FREDERIC GARDNER, D. D. Andover: WARREN F. DRAPER.

The above work unites in a continuous narrative the distinct accounts of the four Evangelists respecting the life of Jesus. In doing this the text of the early Greek manuscripts has been followed; the object being to reproduce as nearly as possible the original inspired record. In both respects the book has the merit of being carefully compiled.

NINETY-FOUR YEARS, AGNES PASCHAL." By GEORGE W. PASCHAL.

MRS. AGNES PASCHAL, who died some two years since at Big Savannah, Ga., was at that time one of the oldest Revolutionary pensioners. Her life extended through nearly a century, and her memoir by her son is filled with incidents of historical interest concerning that portion of the South.

A KING'S DAUGHTER, WITH OTHER STORIES FROM REAL LIFE. By Mrs. H. C. GARDNER. New-York: CARLTON & LANAHAN.

No class of literature has made greater advancement during the past few years than that designed for the use of Sunday-schools, and the present volume marks a continuance of this progress. The sketches are entertaining and instructive, and the style in which they are written remarkably pleasing.

THE CARRIAGE PAINTERS' ILLUSTRATED MANUAL. By F. B. GARDNER. New-York: S. R. WELLS.

The intention of Mr. GARDNER in publishing this book was to give to the members of the trade, with which he has long been associated, and to those thinking of entering it, a clear and concise statement of the principal methods of fancy painting. It is the only American work on this subject ever issued.

LIFE OF SIR WALTER SCOTT. By FRANCIS TURNER PALGRAVE. Philadelphia: POTTER & COATES.

This little volume is one of several that the centennial anniversary of the great novelist has been productive of. It aims merely to give the reader a concise and lucid account of the character both of SCOTT and of his writings, in doing which it is very successful.

SHOOTING, BOATING, AND FISHING. By T. ROBINSON WARREN. New-York: CHARLES SCRIBNER & CO.

These three elements of American sporting life are described in the above volume, and also the manner in which they may be rightly and healthily conducted. The book is intended as a guide for young sportsmen, for which purpose it is admirably adapted.

THE PARABLES OF OUR LORD. By Rev. WILLIAM ARNOT. New-York: ROBERT CARTER & BROTHERS.

The author considers that it is necessary to readapt the teachings of the Bible to each generation, and the above-named volume contains a thorough explanation of Christ's Parables as understood by the critical commentators of the present day.

THE ROYAL DECREE OF SCANDEROON. New-York: RUSSELL'S American Steam Printing House.

This work is a satire on the Municipal Government of New-York, showing the manner in which, under Tammany rule, various reforms were suppose to be effected.

LINDSAY LEE AND HIS FRIENDS. New-York: CARLTON & LANAHAN.

The story under the above title is drawn from instances in the life of Rev. NEWMAN HALL, and is very well written.

COMMENTARY ON THE NEW TESTAMENT, Volume III.—(Acts—Romans.) by D. D. WHEDON, LL. D. New-York: CARLTON & LANAHAN.

Though a general commentary, the above volume is specially devoted to a summary of St. Paul's Apostolic doctrine, in accordance with the views of the primitive church, in distinction to the Augustinian expositions.

LIFE OF JEFFERSON S. BATKINS, Member from Cranberry County. Boston: LOUNG.

This purports to be the autobiography of a country member to the Massachusetts Legislature, including his experiences both political and matrimonial.

SHORT STUDIES ON GREAT SUBJECTS. By JAMES ANTHONY FROUDE, M. A. Second Series. New-York: CHARLES SCRIBNER & CO.

This volume is a collection of the addresses and essays which Mr. FROUDE has either delivered, or published in periodicals, during the past four years.

GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS, from the French of L. ARMAND. By Mrs. C. A. LAZARUS. New-York: CARLTON & LANAHAN.

The life of the great Protestant hero is faithfully described, together with the historical and religious events of the period in which he lived.

HYMNS OF PRAYER AND PRAISE. New-York: A. S. BARNES & CO.

The above book is compiled mainly from the well-known Hymns of the Church, and is intended for family and social worship.

GOLD-DUST. By M. R. PEARMOR. New-York: G. W. CARLTON & CO.

The above contains a series of sketches from life, being a continuation of a previous volume named Saturday Nights.

STORIES OF VINEGAR HILL. (Six volumes, illustrated.) New-York: ROBERT CARTER & BROTHERS.

These books are adapted for Sunday-school use, and form a serial story well sustained throughout.

DOINGS IN MARYLAND, OR MATILDA DOUGLAS. Philadelphia: J. B. LIPPINCOTT & CO.

The work is novel, of considerable local interest, though greatly strained in characterization.

THE DEMOCRATIC DILEMMA.

The Question of a Candidate for Presidency—Discordant Views of the Party Press.

From the Cincinnati Enquirer, Oct. 14.

The St. Louis Republican suggests that no Democratic candidate be nominated for President in 1872, but that the fight be left between GRANT and any other Republican who may choose to enter the field against him. It is no use to discuss this suggestion. It cannot and will not be adopted. The fact that such a course worked well in Missouri at a State election proves nothing. There a large portion of the Democrats were disfranchised, and not allowed to vote, and the issue between the Republican candidates was one for and the other against the then existing order. But in the United States generally there is no such condition of things. An organization which numbers its millions of voters, and which has a majority of the white people of the country, is not going to surrender in advance upon a mere suggestion that its efforts may not be crowned with success. Its political history, its principles and its future allies forbid it. It will to the proper time have its candidates, and make its best fight in their behalf—a fight the Republican (not being a prophet or a son of a prophet) cannot say will not be a success. At any rate, the chance of beating GRANT with a candidate nominated by a Democratic Convention is a great deal better than to throw it in bodily, as they tried to do, the Independent, who could not begin to poll, in such an event, the strength of our organization.

IN TENNESSEE.

From the Nashville Banner, Oct. 14.

As we remarked in our issue of yesterday, commenting upon the result of the elections which have just transpired in Ohio and Pennsylvania, the time is at hand when the people of these Southern States should not be content to hide their heads any longer in the sand, like the innocent ostrich, in fancied security, preferring to hope that all is well when it is not well. The time is at hand when they should look facts squarely in the face, as the Missouri Republican evidently seems to have done. Our situation even more urgently calls for action than does that of the North and West. A change of administration in the affairs of the Federal Government is of more vital importance to the Southern States than to the Northern Democracy, as a party, for they could possibly afford to sustain successive defeat at the ballot-box for an indefinite period, while the helpless South, all the time subjected to the most harsh and rigorous measures of a despotic partisan tyranny at Washington, cannot afford it. It is a significant fact not to be lost sight of, in the line of safe precedents, that the people of the Southern States have in no instance since the war, been able to secure the restoration of representative State government by means of a strictly Democratic organization or under the Democratic name. In the only instance where carpet-bag usurpations, so called, have been overthrown, the deliverance of the people has not been accomplished by means and any supposed magic in the name or presence of the Democratic Party, as such. In every instance Republicans have been elected, and Republican votes have helped to elect them—for only in Missouri, which the Republican cites as an example, but in Tennessee and Virginia. There is no sound reason why a similar experiment should not prove successful over a larger field, and it seems almost beyond the hazard of a doubt that the opposite course must result in inevitable failure. The Republican's suggestion to put no Democratic candidate in the field is commendable for its wisdom, if for nothing, as uniting each bold the Republican Party under the leading banner of the Grant faction. There is no likelihood that GRANT would be accepted as the unanimous choice of the American nation for its President, yet the mass of Republican voters of the South would break away from him, as the result of the policy suggested by the Missouri Republican, would undoubtedly support even GRANT in preference to the nominee of a purely Democratic organization, however popular and influential the names they should place upon their tickets. These are truths, however unpalatable, which every thinking man in the South or North cannot fail to recognize, who is not willfully blind to the actual situation. When leaders awake to the realization that the people demand results instead of mere promises, there may be some hope of anticipating the designs of the Grant faction upon the Republican character of this Government and the constitutions of the several States composing the Federal Union. Until then, we fear, not otherwise.

IN INDIANA.

From the Indianapolis Sentinel, Oct. 14.

The St. Louis Republican urges a new departure—which is, in brief, no nomination of candidate for the Presidency by the Democracy in the election of 1872. The reason it urges for this policy is that it would probably result in a division of the Republican Party and the election of a liberal Republican to the Presidency. And for the wisdom of such a course it refers to the policy adopted by the Democracy of Missouri in deferring the nominations of candidates to the liberal portion of the Republican Party, and which resulted in liberalizing the politics of that State. Suggestions similar to those that are put forth by the St. Louis Republican were recommended by the Louisville Ledger some days since and before the election in Ohio and Pennsylvania—a policy that yields more to the Republicans than the "new departure" advocated by VALLANDIGHAM, and by which the Ledger is utterly opposed. * * * The question comes back, how shall retrenchment, economy and purity be restored in the administration of the Government? That this desired end be best and with certainty accomplished by adopting the proposed policy of the St. Louis Republican, or by continuing the Democratic organization and maintaining its distinctive principles, upon the success of which, depends, as every true Democrat believes, the existence of a constitutional government. The New-York Democracy propose to maintain the principles and organization of the party by rooting out all corruption within its ranks, and making honesty and economy, the rule in the conduct of public affairs; and in addition to this, maintain, as it ever has, a financial policy that in its operation will be just and equal to all the varied sections and industries of the country. And it is there a liberal Republican in the country that cannot support and identify himself with a party that is based upon such principles?

IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

From the Washington Journal, Oct. 14.

There can be little doubt of the almost unanimous renomination of President GRANT. He can be defeated, but it can only be done by the utmost prudence upon the part of is opponents. Next to a very considerable and influential portion of the Radical Party are opposed to his re-election. This party is headed by such men as Senators TRUMBULL and SCHURZ, Gov. BROWN, of Missouri, HORACE GREELEY, and others of the more moderate wing of the party. Of course at the South the ignorant negroes and unprincipled whites, who compose ninety-nine one-hundredths of the Radical Party, will vote for the nominee, without regard to the man. If a nomination is made that can unite the Democratic vote with the moderate Republicans, President GRANT can and will be defeated.

The question then arises, is there such a man? We believe there is. If we go into the Presidential election we win, we must waive all smaller considerations. We must not tilt against the wind. The Southern people, at least, are tired of such useless sport. They have neither the means nor the time to waste. Their material prosperity, more and more, demands their entire attention. They will make no base surrender of principle in the support of any one; but they exhaust themselves in a useless contest. If, then, the lesson of the late elections shall be heeded by the National Democratic Party, it may be as fortunate as their successes four years ago were disastrous. Blessings frequently come in disguise. It requires prudence and wisdom to profit by misfortune.

Democratic Wrangling Over Jeff. Davis—A Lively Dispute as to His Position—He is Declared a Better Patriot Than Heroes or Statesmen.

From the Mobile Register, Oct. 12.

The Montgomery Advertiser, in a recent article, says:

"While we are on this subject, it may not be out of place to say a word in regard to some of the letters now appearing in the columns of the Northern newspapers in the shape of correspondence between Mr. President JEFFERSON DAVIS, in confounding him with the grossest folly known in any country, that man, Mr. DAVIS was and still is one of the most conscientious, honest, and patriotic men of the Party in the United States, that the late Confederacy ever produced. His sentiments are entertaining and liberal, and his views of the true principles of Republican liberty. He is, however, no malcontent. He is not disposed to wage a war against the Government of the United States. He has never given utterance to sentiments calculated to create ill-will in the bosom of the Americans as a race. He knows that these Amendments having been proclaimed ratified, and a part of the Constitution, any attempt by a party in any part of the Government of the United States to create a political issue against them would be folly, having accepted universally that action without remark or regret by arms, as known, we say, that the issue is closed, and to do not propose to advise the people to go into any political agitation, looking to a restoration of the Constitution, original or amended, as it was before the war. Nothing is more absurd than the idea of Northern invasion, as has been recently threatened by MONROE in the shape of regressive laws supported and enforced by arms. He is too great a statesman to propose any such thing. He proposes no course on any subject but what he thinks is right, and does not fear counsel, and we are perfectly satisfied if he were to speak as all it would be in utter contradiction of the statements lately given out editorially making him a traitor. Every other statesman in Georgia some months ago, and denouncing him as was misrepresented and that his appearance in public was a humiliation to a portion of the country. It is nothing remarkable even for the best of men to be misunderstood, and we refer to the letter from observation in a graceful letter to the Franklin Association, at Mobile. Let JEFFERSON DAVIS alone. He is a better patriot today than HORTON or BUTLER. He is a better statesman than any of them. If they were to consider the true interests of the country, they would prefer him for President of the United States to either of those corrupt and vulgar men. He would not cash gifts in office, and would bring labores to justice.

Now, we have no authority whatever to speak for President DAVIS, but have no hesitation in expressing the confident opinion that the above article does him more injustice than any effort that may have been made in any quarter to impeach him in the "Stephensfully." We cannot understand why he is not left to form an opinion or question of his opinions on current questions, but know so well what they have been heretofore, that we unhesitatingly reject that exposition, as utterly inconsistently with what he has uniformly expressed.

Mr. DAVIS has always, since the war, advocated a peaceable, quiet submission to the inevitable consequences of defeat, but he has just as consistently and uniformly refused to endorse any of the legislative iniquities perpetrated by the dominant party. On one memorable occasion he declared that he "accepted nothing." The expression was tortured by his enemies into a mischievous construction, refuted by the whole context of his remarks, but it was yet an expression of principle utterly at variance with the policy of the Radical Party, and restored in the administration of the Government by the this desired end be best and with certainty accomplished by adopting the proposed policy of the St. Louis Republican, or by continuing the Democratic organization and maintaining its distinctive principles, upon the success of which, depends, as every true Democrat believes, the existence of a constitutional government. The New-York Democracy propose to maintain the principles and organization of the party by rooting out all corruption within its ranks, and making honesty and economy, the rule in the conduct of public affairs; and in addition to this, maintain, as it ever has, a financial policy that in its operation will be just and equal to all the varied sections and industries of the country. And is there a liberal Republican in the country that cannot support and identify himself with a party that is based upon such principles?

IN SOUTH CAROLINA.

From the Washington Journal, Oct. 14.

There can be little doubt of the almost unanimous renomination of President GRANT. He can be defeated, but it can only be done by the utmost prudence upon the part of is opponents. Next to a very considerable and influential portion of the Radical Party are opposed to his re-election. This party is headed by such men as Senators TRUMBULL and SCHURZ, Gov. BROWN, of Missouri, HORACE GREELEY, and others of the more moderate wing of the party. Of course at the South the ignorant negroes and unprincipled whites, who compose ninety-nine one-hundredths of the Radical Party, will vote for the nominee, without regard to the man. If a nomination is made that can unite the Democratic vote with the moderate Republicans, President GRANT can and will be defeated.

The question then arises, is there such a man? We believe there is. If we go into the Presidential election we win, we must waive all smaller considerations. We must not tilt against the wind. The Southern people, at least, are tired of such useless sport. They have neither the means nor the time to waste. Their material prosperity, more and more, demands their entire attention. They will make no base surrender of principle in the support of any one; but they exhaust themselves in a useless contest. If, then, the lesson of the late elections shall be heeded by the National Democratic Party, it may be as fortunate as their successes four years ago were disastrous. Blessings frequently come in disguise. It requires prudence and wisdom to profit by misfortune.

MONDAY, Oct. 16—P. M.

The outlook of affairs in Wall-street today is not so reassuring for the Stock people as at the close of business on Saturday. There is a renewed demand for Money at comparatively dear rates on Railway and Miscellaneous Stocks, which discourages speculation. As late as 4 o'clock P. M., prices for the New-York and Western Roads and for Western Telegraph, Pacific Mail, &c., were not so good as our closing quotations at 6 o'clock on Saturday.

The Public Funds are a prominent exception to the duller confidence of the Street, and so are some few of the Railway Mortgages dealt in on the other side of the Atlantic, where money is reported easy and the American Funds in firm demand and higher. The advantage of the London and Frankfort quotations to the New-York market is partially qualified today by another reaction in the Exchanges, which are back to 109⅜@109¾ ₱ cent. on London, and by the lower sales, 113¾ ₱ cent., of Gold. The turn in the Exchanges was somewhat unexpected, after the stiffness manifested on Saturday. It is accounted for by the amounts offering against American Stocks, and by considerable sums in 60-day London Bills, which are being loaned on Stock collateral. In these negotiations the borrower takes the chances of paying higher for Exchange when the loans come to be returned, and on a Stock market such as we have had for a week past, fluctuating 1@2 ₱ cent. every hour, it signifies very little whether the Exchange borrowed and its proceeds in Gold are disposed of 1-32 ₱ cent. below the market or not.

The 5-20s of 1867 sold up to 113⅞@113¾ ₱ cent. on the London advices and the scarcity of this class of Bonds in the market here. The other 5-20s dealt in abroad, and also the 10-40s, were firm through the forenoon, but later in the day, on the decline in Gold and Exchange, the market was less animated. We give below the very latest quotations.

The sales of Gold opened at 114⅛@114, and gradually gave way to 113⅝@113⅜@113¾ ₱ cent. The Cash Gold being easy, the holders paid 6-32 ₱ cent. Interest to carry over balances, which is an unusual occurrence in the Gold Room of late. The ease in supply and fall in price also work contrary to the ordinary effect upon the Foreign Exchanges. The demand for the latter, so far from increasing with cheaper Gold, is dull, and the supply of Bills, from various causes, as partly explained above, is pressing on the market.

Money is in demand among the Brokers at 7 ₱ cent. Gold Interest, and the smaller borrowers on Railroad Stocks were paying a small commission for turning their collateral until to-morrow, until late in the day when the offerings of Money were rather easier.

On the Stock Exchange the business of the day was fairly active on the Southern State Bonds and on the Railways and Western Telegraph, the market opening with some appearance of firmness, but yielding on the demand for Money after the First Board. The inquiry for the Pacific and Western Railroad Mortgages was good, and there was also a stronger inclination to buy Tennessee and South Carolina Bonds at the recent decline. The purchases of both were considerable, and also of the First Mortgages and Land Grants of Union Pacific. In Western Telegraph another very heavy day's work was done, although not up to the enormous purchases on Saturday. The New-York and Western Railway Stocks and Reading fluctuated 1@1¼ ₱ cent. through the operations of the day, and as remarked at the outset of this report, the prevailing tone of speculation was less confident than at the close of last week.

After the late Boards the Public Funds fell ⅛@¼ ₱ cent. from the highest points in the forenoon, on the decline in Gold and heavy appearance of Exchange. The 1867s 5-20s left off 113¾ ₱ cent.

In the Money market it is stated that some of the Banks have been calling in demand loans with some earnestness today. They are probably anxious to put themselves in line as early as practicable, although we hear few or no reflections upon their course last week in working without particular regard to rule. Next week the Treasury will pay out $8,000,000 or $10,000,000 Gold Notes on the November Interest, which must go directly into Bank and strengthen their lawful Money basis, while the Foreign Exchanges are so low.

At the close of the Stock Exchange Room, late in the afternoon, the following quotations were made as compared with Saturday afternoon. The Railroads and Western Telegraph were comparatively weak.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

☞ FIRST MORTGAGE SINKING FUND LAND-GRANT BONDS OF THE ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY RAILROAD COMPANY,

IN DENOMINATIONS OF $1,000, $500, AND $100, can now be had from the undersigned or through the principal banks and bankers of the United States. The attention of investors is invited to the merits of these bonds, secured by a first and only mortgage on the road, equipments, franchises, and property of a trunk line of railroad which will shorten the distance between New-York and San Francisco some 230 miles, and in addition the mortgage to secure the bonds covers a land-grant of 1,800,000 acres of the most fertile land in the West, which is prohibited from being sold at less than four ($4) dollars per acre by the terms of the mortgage deed, and according to the present market price of the Illinois Central Company's lands is worth $18,750,000. This loan was originally for $5,500,000, but has been largely reduced by subscriptions of actual investors. The remaining balance of the loan is offered at 97½ and accrued interest, but the right is reserved to advance the price at any time, without notice.

The bonds have thirty years to run; bear 8 per cent. interest, payable in New-York, London or Frankfort-on-the-Main, at the option of the holder, without notice, free of taxes. BOTH PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST ARE PAYABLE IN GOLD. They are Coupon Bonds, but can be registered with the coupons on, or can be registered with the coupons off, and interest paid to registered owner. Interest payable Aug. 15 and Feb. 15. A liberal sinking fund, formed from the entire land sales, in payment for which the bonds will be received at par and accrued interest, provides for the early extinguishment of this loan.

Trustees—Farmers' Loan and Trust Company.

These bonds offer favorable inducements to parties desiring to fund their Five-Twenties or other high-priced securities.

In converting Five-Twenties the investors realize 11 per cent. profit on the principal; 2 per cent. per annum excess of interest; and at the same time get a perfect security.

Maps, circulars, documents, and full information furnished on application.

Though acting as agents for the sale of this loan, our firm buy and sell in their regular business the bonds of the St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad Company, those of the Eastern Division being now quoted at 102 and accrued interest. These were originally placed by us at 97½.

TANNER & CO.,
Bankers, No. 11 Wall-st.

☞ THE WEST WISCONSIN RAILWAY is now very nearly finished, and trains will be running through from Tomah to St. Paul by Nov. 1. The earnings of the Road from local traffic on the completed portion constitute already a profitable business; and arrangements and connections are about perfected which will make it the Great Air-Line Route from Chicago to the North-west, effecting a saving of more than 100 miles over the present route. The Bonds are a First Mortgage on the road itself and on a valuable Land Grant of 1,000,000 acres. They bear interest in gold at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum, and are sold now at 90 and accrued interest in currency by WHITE, MORRIS & CO., No. 16 Wall-st. and GWYNNE, JOHNSON & DAY, No. 19 Wall-st., where pamphlets and further information may be obtained.

☞ JACKSON COUNTY, MISSOURI, 8 PER CENT. BONDS,

For sale by
W. P. CONVERSE & CO.,
No. 54 Pine-st.

☞ BURLINGTON, CEDAR RAPIDS AND Minnesota Seven per Cent. Gold Sinking Fund Bonds for sale at par and interest by HENRY CLEWS & CO., No. 32 Wall-st., New-York.

The New-York Times.
DAILY, WEEKLY AND SEMI-WEEKLY.

This journal is now thoroughly identified with the greatest political necessity of the hour—encouraging, working against all forms of corruption, whether in national or local government. For years past the TIMES has been exposing the demoralizing influence of self-interested politicians, and its recent workings upon the Tammany Democrats has been received with universal approval. It has adhered to this pledge given in its original prospectus, more than seventy years ago, that the public mind'll be truly represented, and their interests faithfully guarded through its columns. Its record has been pure and consistent, and the highest aim of its proprietors is to render it more and more worthy of its past history, and of the confidence which the public repose in it. Two out of three of the original proprietors still constitute policy, and guide it on all public questions. They perceive that the TIMES shall continue to keep clear of all narrow and unworthy influences and alliances, and aim to represent the great body of the people, or during control from personal factions. It is accepted a purely independent position, and is free to speak the truth on all subjects and about all men. The steadily increasing circulation throughout the country, adds to its power and influence. It will continue to be a faithful exponent of Republican principles, and advocate with untiring energy every cause which tends to further the welfare of the people.

The utmost care will be devoted to gathering political news from special sources during the Presidential canvass. That department of the paper will be unusually full and trustworthy. Renewed enterprise will be exhibited in every department of the paper, and larger space will be devoted to reports of speeches made during canvassing, or on other important political occasions.

A very full summary of news, and many general articles of great interest, are published in the semi-weekly edition, and in the Weekly edition there is an unabridged report of the proceedings at the Farmers' Club, an excellent summary of political information, and a great variety of matter suitable for family reading.

The NEW-YORK TIMES is pre-eminently a family paper, all objectionable advertisements being rigidly excluded; and it has a constantly increasing circulation among the most respectable classes of the community.

To Advertisers.

Advertisers in the TIMES are requested to bring in their notices at as early an hour in the day as possible. If received after 8 o'clock, it will be impossible to classify them in the proper heads.

☞ For the accommodation of up-town residents, advertisements for insertion in the TIMES will be received at No. 84 West 23d-st., junction of Broadway and 6th-av., and No. 1,241 Broadway, at same rates as are charged at office of publication.

☞ Messrs. DREXEL, HARJES & Co., Bankers, No. 5 Rue Scribe, Paris, are the accredited agents for the NEW-YORK TIMES in that city.

Notices.

We cannot notice anonymous communications. In all cases we require the writer's name and address, not for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

We cannot under any circumstances return rejected communications, nor can we undertake to preserve manuscripts.

☞ Advertisements for the WEEKLY TIMES must be handed in before 10 o'clock this evening.

The GERMAN and ENGLISH EDITIONS of the Pamphlet published by the TIMES, containing a complete history of the Tammany Frauds, are now ready and for sale at the TIMES counter. Price six cents a copy, or $4 per hundred to dealers.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Emperor of Germany opened the Reichsrath in person, yesterday, and made a speech expressing gratification with the progress of unification. On the subject of finances, he said the advances made by the different States would have to be paid out of the French indemnity. The Budget must provide for the expense of settling the Government of the territory acquired from France. A modification of the coinage for uniformity was suggested, and a line of communication to Italy through Switzerland, so controlled as to fairly secure consideration for the interests of Germany, was pointed to. Disturbances are reported in Corsica, which are ascribed to Bonapartist agencies. A great Republican meeting was held, yesterday, in Madrid, and resolutions opposing the present Government, and all forms of government not Republican, were adopted. The boldest sentiments, even to sympathy with the International Society, were uttered by the speakers. M. FIGARD has been appointed French Minister to Italy, in place of the Count DE CHOISEUL, recalled. M. GUIZOT goes as French Minister to Greece. The appointment of M. PIGEON as Minister to the United States has been withdrawn in deference to public opinion. An address has been issued by representative working men in England, demanding separation of Church and State in England. The address announces that meetings of working men will be held throughout the country in support of the movement. The Inman steamer City of Paris, which left this port for Liverpool Oct. 7, was off Cape Clear yesterday broken down. Steamers had gone to her assistance. A strong breeze was blowing, but not sufficient to excite any apprehensions for the steamer's safety.

In all election districts the places of registry are open today from 9 A. M. to 10 P. M. Let every voter find out the address where the inspectors sit, and register without delay.

Will Gov. Hoffman Save New-York?

Gov. HOFFMAN has lately delivered some highly seasonable and judicious remarks about the source of and remedy for municipal corruption. At White Plains and elsewhere he has, without special reference to the condition of New-York City, shown that he had carefully observed and considered the degraded position into which an unscrupulous Ring of local politicians has dragged us. Gov. HOFFMAN has, it is true, taken no official action, and expressed no official opinion about the present crisis in our affairs. For this he can hardly be blamed. The gross frauds which have been lately unveiled, and the practical disorganization of the City Government which has followed their disclosure, are not unknown to him. But they have not been brought under his notice in such a form that he could take action upon them as Chief Magistrate of the State. After today, the excuse for reticence will no longer exist. A Committee consisting of a deputation from the Committee of Seventy will, by the time these lines meet the eye of the reader, be in Albany for the purpose of waiting upon the State Executive and laying before him the critical condition of affairs in New-York City. Long and cumbrous explanations will be perfectly unnecessary, in order to enable the Governor to understand the urgent need which exists for Executive interference. He has himself held the position of Mayor in New-York, and no one knows better than he how flimsy are the excuses of his contemptible successor for signing away the stolen millions of public money. Gov. HOFFMAN'S name is at the foot of the Two per Cent. act, and he certainly did not sign it on the clear understanding that it was to furnish a cloak to unlimited fraud and reckless extravagance.

The Committee will not be called upon to remind the Governor of what are the responsibilities of the City officials who have so basely betrayed their trust. As a body representing the plundered tax-payers of this community, they will simply be required to claim from him the protection which his position enables him to afford, and which they can seek in no other quarter. On July 13, when our liberties were about to be basely surrendered at the dictation of a mob, Gov. HOFFMAN promptly and nobly remembered that the Constitution prescribes "that the Executive power shall be vested in the Governor," and "that he shall take care that the laws are faithfully executed." The men whom he rebuked then, are the same whom he is called upon to skye us from now. His proclamation and his action on July 13 earned him the gratitude of all good citizens, for it averted from our City the stain of a lasting disgrace. A still nobler task is open to him now, bringing with its discharge the certainty of a still higher reward. It is no partisan demand which will be made upon him. It will be pressed by men of both parties, and will be echoed even more loudly by the leading Democratic than by the Republican journals of the nation. He will be reminded that the public works of the commercial Metropolis of the Union have been brought to a stand-still because the men intrusted with their direction have stolen and squandered the money set apart for carrying them out. It will be brought under his notice that thousands of laboring men are in danger of being thrown out of employment and now find great difficulty in getting paid what they have wrought for, simply because the funds to which they were entitled have been used in the payment of an army of sinecurists, and in the discharge of fraudulent claims by contractors, who have shared their gains with the men in power. It will be pointed out that, while the men who stand convicted of malfeasance in office remain where they are, the situation will grow daily worse, instead of better. The good name and the credit of New-York have been dragged in the dust, and while men who have been proven to be thieves retain the power of spending public money, the people will refuse to trust them with the means of further peculation.

The Governor is perfectly cognizant of the channels through which our City frauds have been conducted. It will hardly be necessary to point out to him that had our local rulers not felt that they were equally guilty with the chief fraudulent contractors, they would long ago have saved themselves from the force of public indignation by prosecuting the men who received at least one hundred dollars for every dollar they justly earned. If riot and murder were rampant in the City, and the authorities, instead of punishing the criminals, sided with and protected them, the Governor of the State could not hesitate for a single moment in calling out the militia to protect the outraged citizens. A perfectly parallel case exists at the present moment. Heads of Departments have been convicted of inciting to riot in order to divert attention from their dishonesty and extravagance. A gang of City robbers has been discovered, and the District-Attorney and the Corporation Counsel alike refrain from indicting them. The Mayor of the City neglects every duty, and devotes himself to the task of covering up fraud and obstructing the work of reform. The laws are not "faithfully executed," and now or never is the time for Gov. HOFFMAN to interpose his constitutional authority, and deliver our City Government from chaos and our citizens from plunder and the fear of violence. The greatest community of the western world anxiously awaits his decision.

The Talk About "Riot."

The Tweed party are at present bent on securing the next Legislature. This they can do only by committing frauds at the ballot-box, and by false counting after the polls are closed. Part of their plan is to keep honest citizens from the polls by threats of violence. The machinery for this move is already being got ready. The men in one of the public departments are being secretly drilled every day—so we learn on authority which we find it impossible to doubt. The other morning a body of about 3,500 men marched down Fifth-avenue, paused at the house of Boss TWEED, and gave him three cheers—which a servant girl smilingly acknowledged from an upper window—and then marched on to have an interview with Mr. ANDREW H. GREEN, and demand their money from him—money of which the Boss, for whom they had just cheered, had helped to rob them. There never was a more impudent—nor we must add, a more successful contrivance. The thieves set their victims at the men who exposed them, and said, "These are the people who robbed you." And the laborers at once allowed the thieves to escape.

This is trick number one. Trick number two is to get any journal which can be prevailed upon to support the Ring, openly or covertly, to accuse the persons who have been engaged in exposing the robbers, of "trying to incite a riot." Thus, Mr. ANDREW H. GREEN is represented to be trying to stir up a riot. The Committee of Seventy are at the same game. The proprietors of this paper are also guilty. And a journal like the New-York Tribune, once powerful, but now bolstered up only by the shadow of a name, is not ashamed to lend itself to this particular trick. The crooked course which it has pursued all through the contest, and which has in every way injured it so much, leads it now to repeat an accusation which no one who is not an ass (to use its own language) or a knave could have made—namely, that we have boasted of our power to stir up a riot. Our readers are not all jaundiced politicians, and they can judge for themselves of the justice of this particular charge. We have no time to answer one-half of the preposterous slanders which the Tribune invents about us, or takes up from the columns of HILTON'S paper, solely for the purpose of giving support to its Tammany friends, who at this very moment are loading down its columns with advertisements. Let the Tribune go its own road to ruin. But this "dodge" of accusing us of stirring up a riot, because we have dared to expose the Tammany gang, must be thought a very shrewd one, or it would not be tried so often. With all the silly arrogance, bad taste, and childish misrepresentations which abound in the Tribune, it is slightly more sane on most subjects than the Express. That paper, too, joins in the howl at the TIMES. In our columns yesterday, there appeared the following remarks:

"Truth and justice do not always gain a fair hearing, but in this case we hope the laboring men will turn upon HILTON and his gang, and ask, 'What have you done with our money? How much of it did you get?'"

Will it be believed that these words are twisted by the Express into another attempt on the part of the TIMES to incite a riot? Is it not quite clear that our words convey nothing more, and were meant to convey nothing more, than the advice to the laboring men to ask HILTON & Co. what has become of their money?

But, it appears, we are to be prohibited even from saying this. The men in HILTON'S department are being drilled, and if you dare to remonstrate with HILTON, he will accuse you of "inciting a riot." The Tribune, with its mean jealousies and utter want of all principle, takes up the handful of mud, and flings it with the ardor which comes by nature to a narrow mind soured by disappointment. Does the Tribune seriously suppose it can recover its lost ground by multiplying falsehoods about the TIMES? Is that the way to regain the respect of its old readers, who have left it in disgust at its lukewarmness in the present contest against convicted thieves?

The public cannot but look with contempt upon the attempt of the Tribune to draw off attention from the Ring by creating a newspaper quarrel. Let the Tribune continue to do the dirty work of its Hank Smith alliances—the public will continue to do its best to defeat the whole gang, and as for those who are responsible for the exposures of Tammany, they must continue to bear the abuse of Tammany's henchmen. The all-important thing is to win this fight, and that can only be done by excessive care. Those who should be our friends are betraying us. The Tribune has never done anything but throw cold water on this contest—now it is proceeding a step further, and screams out hysterical abuse of everybody who has had the audacity to call for justice against the whole Tammany gang. There is no help to be looked for in that quarter. But if the people stand firm, it will matter very little what cantankerous newspapers do. If any disturbances are projected on the day of election, or at any other time, they will know who is responsible for them. No amount of lying will induce them to ascribe that responsibility to the TIMES, which has sought for reform by lawful means alone, but which at the same time has warned HILTON & Co. that if they try to raise a riot they will be the first to suffer.

Elect No Dishonest Republicans.

We have already taken occasion to urge upon the Republican Party throughout the State the importance of putting forward thoroughly honest men as candidates for the next Legislature. There is no disguising the fact that Albany legislation is the source of a great part of the official corruption that has been brought to light in this City. The Tammany Ring has had its agents and lobbyists hanging about the Capitol every Winter for years past, to assist in its work of legislative bribery and fraud; and, with the aid of a united delegation or in the local representing this City, it has been enabled to shape legislation to suit its own purposes. Nor is the Republican Party wholly without blame. While the Democratic members of the Legislature have been, without exception, the subservient tools of TWEED, SWEENY, CONNOLLY and HALL, and have voted in a body for every corrupt measure concocted by the "Ring," it is also true that there have been for years past a greater or less number of faithless Republicans who have dishonored their party and disgraced themselves by corrupt alliances with the enemy in the way of "log-rolling" legislation, and sometimes by the downright sale of their votes for money.

The leading Democratic paper in the State, while admitting the crimes of its party leaders, has added to their infamy by charging, as an excuse for their robberies, that the money stolen by them from the tax-payers of this City has been used to buy up Republicans in the Legislature. The truth is, that where one Republican has sold his vote to the Ring, a dozen Democrats have done the same thing, for the legislation usually sought for by the Tammany thieves was well understood to be of a private and not of a party character, and Democrats, no less than Republicans, refused to vote for their bills unless paid for so doing. But the Republican Party cannot afford to be represented in the Legislature by any men of this stamp, even though they should number only one to ten of their opponents. The Democratic Party, by its late action in State Convention, has openly announced its continued alliance and fellowship with the official knaves whose crimes have startled the whole civilized world, and the people have nothing to hope for from that quarter. To the Republican Party, alone, can they look, in the present emergency, for aid in stemming the tide of legislative corruption and official malfeasance that threatens to engulf the State and bankrupt its Treasury.

We again urge upon Republicans everywhere to put in nomination for the next Legislature only such men as have the full confidence of their constituents, and who will reflect credit upon the party to which they belong. If men known or suspected of corrupt practices in previous Legislatures succeed in getting a renomination, let honest Republicans refuse to support them. It is even better that Democrats should be elected in Republican districts, than that the Republican Party should bear the odium of sending thieves and bribe-takers to the Legislature. If the Democrats prove corrupt, as they most likely will, their party, and not ours, will have to take the responsibility. We have already expressed our opinion of the nomination of Mr. MATTHEW P. BERGUS in Chautauqua County, and we hope he will be defeated. There may be and doubtless are, or will be, other candidates nominated by Republican Conventions who are unworthy the support of true Republicans; and, wherever this shall be the case, we trust that they will receive the fitting rebuke of an ignominious defeat from their constituents.

The Republican Inspectors of Election.

The Tribune, in its eagerness to assist its friends, fully "indorses" the Republican Inspectors whom Mayor HALL has appointed in the Second Assembly District. As they were appointed on the recommendation of MARK LANIGAN and HENRY SMITH, everybody would naturally suppose that the Tribune would approve of them. Without making any "libelous statements" we can make the following comments on the Inspectors:

JOHN CONNORS, alias Jakey, is not a Republican, and never pretended to be. Was President of the William Walsh Association, and a prize-fighter.

JOHN W. O'CONNOR, an officer of the Court of Sessions.

JOHN CONIGAN, a Democrat. Always votes once at least.

JOHN VIDT. Was Inspector last year and ordered the United States Supervisor and Inspectors out of the room.

THOMAS CUMMINS, cousin to Alderman COMAN. Broken on the Police.

JOHN HEANEY, under Board of Works.

RAYMOND CONDEN, has not voted Republican ticket for some years.

BENJ. B. MALLORY, known as a "kurfist." Arrested for stabbing several times.

LORENZO CASEY does not live in the District.

WILLIAM GLENDENNING, a well-known Democrat.

DENNIS SULLIVAN, member of Walter Roche Club; keeps a low groggery.

WALLACE GREEN, an inspector last year, and allowed another person to vote on his (GREEN'S) name.

Does any one expect such men as these to prevent illegal voting? And yet the Tribune supports them. Let people draw their own conclusions from these facts.

Relief for the Poor.

The charity so bounteously poured forth on Chicago suggests some attention to the wants of our own poor during the coming Winter. In one respect at least, for a long time to come, the poor man will be better off in Chicago than here. For there, at least, he will not lack employment. The fire, cruel and relentless as it has been, brought at least this compensation. The ruined city must be restored, and this renewal will, for many months, afford abundance of well-paid work to willing hands. In this respect this overwhelming calamity may almost be regarded as a benefit to a portion at least of the community on which it has seemed to bear so hardly. But for our own poor there is no such doubtful alleviation in prospect, and Heaven forbid that there should be. If the Winter is to be as long and severe as many weather-wise prophets have predicted, it is not too soon to begin to organize measures for the prompt assistance or relief of those among us to whom Winter is a name synonymous with suffering and want.

Especially should that large class be regarded, in whom refinement and education, perhaps previous affluence, embitter the woes of poverty. It is just this class, most deserving as they are, who are least likely to seek or to receive help. From anything in the shape of alms their instincts revolt at once, while it is often difficult for them to procure remunerative labor. Women particularly—and there are many such in our City who are as cultivated as they are poor, are subjected to countless hardships and indignities in the effort to procure an honorable livelihood. For such as these, to name one among many devices that might profitably be used, an establishment on the plan of the London Association for the Sale of Work by Ladies of Limited Means would prove of very great utility. The Association acts as a medium of communication between the buyers and producers of those elegant little trifles in lace embroidery and crochet work, which ladies delight in and manufacture best. These are sold for a reasonable profit at the shop of the Association, where also orders are received and distributed. Such an institution, conducted on a reasonable basis and charging only fair prices for good work, would obviously be the means of doing a vast deal of good. In Chicago, too, where so many families have been reduced at once from wealth to a condition bordering on destitution the plan would doubtless be productive of most beneficial results.

A Hint for the Prevention of Election Frauds.

Mayor HALL has refused to allow honest citizens to have any voice in the choice of inspectors of election. A majority of the inspectors who are to count the vote which is to decide whether or not New-York City is to remain in the hands of thieves, are the same men who, in 1870, when the check put upon them by the presence of the United States supervisors was withdrawn, began to count falsely. Thus they did in the Sixth Ward, and generally wherever the United States officials chanced to be absent or off their guard. The Mayor says that he has only discretion to appoint 370 new inspectors, and probably a few more before election, to fill vacancies which have occurred or may occur by reason of sickness, death, declination, or other causes, or unsuitableness.

It is by the agency of bought and knavish inspectors that the Ring has been enabled to keep its tight grip upon the throat of New-York. The inspectors of 1870, recollected by the Mayor in 1871, were willing, last year, to be made tools of Tammany, but the United States supervisors, by their watch over them, prevented twenty thousand fraudulent votes from being counted in the Democratic majority. This was the number less the vote which was thrown for the Democrats in the previous election, though the Republican vote was full as large as in that election. The United States officers would have prevented more fraud had they been empowered to supervise the counting of ballots thrown for other than national officers, but their duties ceased when the canvass for the State and City ticket began, and Mayor HALL'S inspectors had then everything their own way. HAGGERTY is charged with having counted falsely 150 votes for Tammany, and would be now under arrest upon that charge were he not locked up in the Tombs for the burglary in the Controller's office. The party of Reform must control the next Legislature. It is to be done, if at all, by vigilance at the polls. Let the Council of Political Reform, Committee of Seventy, and Republicans, appoint three citizens "without fear and without reproach" to attend each polling place in their own district on each day of registration, and on the day of election, to keep a sharp look-out for fraud. Let them be provided with a blank book and pencil to take down the name of every man who registers in the district as an elector, or is sworn in under the new law without having been registered, and keep the list which he thus obtains for reference until after the election.

Let the Committee who may have the matter in charge compare the totals of these lists with the vote cast in each district, and see if they tally. If after the election there is the least ground for belief that the inspectors of election counted falsely, let a call be made for affidavits, as in Connecticut last Spring, from those living in the district canvassed by the suspected inspectors who have voted the Anti-Tammany ticket. Honest men will respond, and should it appear that the false inspectors have counted a hundred votes on the side to which but fifty by right belongs, then will the fraud be brought home, and the State Legislature will be forced to take cognizance of such evidence. It is certainly impossible that New-York City can be so corrupt as to allow itself, by a fair vote, to be again represented in the Legislature by men whose frauds and crimes have been so well and thoroughly exposed. If there is a Tammany triumph at the polls in November, it may be safely set down as having been secured by a fraudulent vote, and in such an event this system of checks may be instrumental in driving the scoundrels out of their seats.

MINOR TOPICS.

The New-York Standard asks, in an article which we quote elsewhere, "Where is Gov. FENTON?" What is he doing toward making sure of a victory for the right next month? Senator CONKLING has made a very able speech—which, by the by, the Tribune was obliged to mutilate. But Senator FENTON is silent. Better that, perhaps, than make such a speech as he did just before the election last Fall—a speech designed to convey the impression to Republican voters that the defeat of their cause was certain. Then the Standard asks, "What has the Tribune done in this canvass?" Why, told a score or two of lies about the TIMES, and followed it with systematic and idiotic misrepresentation. Is not that enough?

"A young man's letter," in another column, describes with great spirit the WRITER'S experience in politics in this City, and he asks to be shown a way in which he can now be of service. His experience is not a novel one. The "machinery" of the Republican Party in most cities, has fallen into the hands of men who devote their time to, and get their living from, managing it. Whatever great issues of the party, taking the country through, is honest and pure enough to neutralize the evils flowing from this fact, it is, nevertheless, a fact of great importance. It can only be removed by an adequate civil service reform. Such a reform can be helped by our correspondent by relentlessly voting against every "machine" politician whom he believes to be corrupt, and never voting for any man whom he does not believe to be fit for office, and by urging on all his friends to combine in such action. This will not reform the abuse this Fall or next, but it is the one thing absolutely necessary ever to reform it. It is the slow process by which we shall, after awhile, get men in our Legislative bodies who will give us the reform of the civil service which we need. Meanwhile, we believe our correspondent can safely vote, and use all his influence, for such men as Messrs. SCHURZ and BARLOW, on the Republican State ticket, with a reasonable hope of thereby promoting the reform of Municipal and State abuses. In regard to Legislative nominations we shall speak as they are made, and we shall not forget that while all political good is attained by degrees, we have no right to ask citizens to vote for men whom they cannot trust to do the work of the office sought for by them.

The most zealous and faithful ally the Tribune has had in its attacks on the honest Republicans of this City, and its defense of the "Hank" Smith General Committee, has been the Sunday Mercury. That paper has echoed all the Tribune slanders against Republicans, and copied with delight all its defenses of the Tammany thieves. So grateful was it for the services rendered to its party by the Tribune, that when HORACE GREELEY started on his stumping tour for the Presidency out West, the Mercury recruited his departure with tears in its eyes, and said: "As an honest and ill-abused Radical, as well as a fellow-editor, we wish him success." Yesterday the Tribune, in speaking of the renomination of Senator CASSEWELL, one of the editors of the Mercury, says that the "Sunday Mercury is the most shamelessly prodigate sheet that ever pandered to and stimulated the debauchery and depravity of our City." Seeing that the Mercury has done little else of late but reprint the eccentricity of the Tribune and praise its editor, we are inclined to indorse the verdict of "H. G."

No careful observer can doubt that the feeling for restoring the Empire gains strength in France. The shifting tone of some of the Paris journals is one sign of it, and the letters of correspondents to the London Press are full of similar scenes. A banquet took place at Bastey by last accounts, and some officers present acted "Vive l'Empereur." They were sent at once to the Army of the Loire, which is supposed to be more Republican than any other. Opposition newspapers call the movement the "Bonapartist conspiracy," but if, as a late writer observes, "half of France is conspiring against the other half," the legitimate significance of the phrase is somewhat modified. The establishment of L'Ordre, which openly urges the restoration of the Empire in Paris, and the exceeded election of M. ROUHER to the Assembly, are facts the meaning of which cannot well be disputed.

The officers of Christ Church, corner of Fifth-avenue and Thirty-fifth-street, have established a depot in their Sunday-school room at which supplies will be received for the Chicago sufferers. Cast-off or other clothing of every description will be very acceptable, and contributions of under-clothing and shoes for women and children are especially solicited. The rector and committee of members of this church will visit Chicago in person, and subscriptions which have been collecting funds for this end may wisely take the opportunity to send either cash or judiciously-purchased articles by these trustworthy hands. We would suggest to the Committee of Christ Church, and to others of similar charitable disposition, that, as large tracts of Wisconsin and Michigan have also been ravaged by fire, and infinite misery and want have been entailed thereby, it might be well, while acting munificently by Chicago, not altogether to forget the needy and afflicted elsewhere.

Grace Greenwood contributes to our columns today another very interesting sketch of life in Colorado. Her account of the Fair at Denver will amuse every reader; and it will be seen that our correspondent had an opportunity of studying what the farmers in that district can do with their land. Our correspondent's remarks on the popular feeling in Colorado relative to the difficulty of obtaining admission as a State, are deserving of serious attention.

Personal.

Mr. COQUERELL'S lectures to-night on the "Siege of Paris" will doubtless draw all lovers of eloquence, admirers of philanthropy, or seekers after light upon the French situation, to the Cooper Union at 8 o'clock. As M. COQUERELL was in Paris all the time, and an active alleviator of the misery of the seige, as he personally shared the hunger, anxiety and humiliation of those terrible weeks, he is able, with his vivid perceptions, his lively memory, and his picturesque imagination, to reproduce his experiences in a way to fascinate and inform all hearers. His English is just enough distinguished by a French accent to heighten the charm of his oratory. All who have seen him unite in admiration of his powers, earnestness and eloquence. He is a hearty Republican, and throws much light upon the political prospects of France. Go, by all means, and hear him.

CHINA.

Frightful Ravages by Typhoons—Ten Thousand Square Miles Submerged—The Misdeeds.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 11, via SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 15.—There have been typhoons on the China coast. Many vessels have been dismasted and two lost. The China and Japan Treaty, which has been signed at Pekin, is said to be an exact copy of the United States Treaty. The high water at Hankow has caused fears of the city being overflowed. The pilot-boat Golden Gate has been lost with Pilot DEVENNE on board. There has been a great rise in the Yang-tse-kiang. It is estimated that 10,000 square miles are under water. There is in consequence great suffering. United States Minister LOWE is at Shanghai en route for Pekin. A terrible typhoon has occurred at Hong Kong. Three ships were dismasted and one lost, and hundreds of Chinese drowned. A United States naval hospital is to be built at Yokahama. The United States steamer Benicia has gone to Hancow. The ship Golden State has sailed for New-York. The crew had a row, and the second mate, CHARLES BROWN, was stabbed, and is lying dangerously wounded in the hospital. The Shensis Fair excitement, at Hankow, has been suppressed; politically all is quiet in the city. The City Hall at Hong Kong was struck by lightning. The rinderpest has appeared at Mongolia. The deliveries of black tea are 1,000,000 pounds more than at the same date last year.

THE FENIAN RAID.

O'Neil Acquitted Through a Legal Informality.

PEMBINA, Oct. 14, via MOORHEAD, Oct. 15.

The United States Commissioner discharged O'NEIL, DONOHUE, DONNELLY and CURLEY, yesterday, deciding that the Court had no jurisdiction, the offense having been committed in Canada. Evidence of the Canadian officials who saw O'NEIL'S party cross the line is rejected from legal informality in producing the witnesses. Col. WHEATON retains the arms and ammunition. O'NEIL'S party return to St. Paul.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

Steinway Hall.

MRS. MOULTON'S FIRST CONCERT.

That Steinway Hall was well filled last night, that the taste and fashion of New-York were richly represented, that Mrs. MOULTON was received with enthusiasm and applauded to the echo, may all be regarded as foregone conclusions. There are people upon whom fashion seems bent on lavishing her choicest favors; for whose feet the proprietor velvet and primroses; for whose brows the wreath of triumph; and for whose hearts the splendid inflorescence of universal homage. Such homage may appear to envelop any possible desert. Were Othello's "entire and perfect chrysolite" could scarcely match them. Yet cases occur, both in and out of the world of art, in which they are not degraded; and if we look narrowly and analyze such cases we shall find that envy has been disarmed by appeals to the sympathies and by taking captive the imagination. The fair songstress who first met her public last night as a profound artist strikes us at every turn as one of those cherished idols of fortune. She is "queen by the gold on her head" as truly as the poet's mistress whose brow was kissed by the sun. Her regal power is owned at once, and that without a murmur, if not without a sigh. In a word, there is about Mrs. MOULTON a strong fascination, which is felt before she opens her lips at all, and which afterward is hardly to be resisted.

Perhaps this implies that Mrs. MOULTON owes more to personal magnetism and less to the mastery of her art than we meant to convey; and perhaps questions regarding the extent of the former might well at first warp the judgment of practiced observers. We hasten, therefore, to say that without any such imputation at all, Mrs. MOULTON might be safely, even if a much less sympathetic artist; and that we have never seen any first appearance whatever so curiously free from the characteristic blemishes of such occasions. The lady came upon the stage with that simple grace which commonly takes so long to acquire, and, with the faintest, evanescent sign of timidity, sang at once as if she had been used to face crowds in a vast hall for years. As the programme of this interesting occasion has appeared in some of the advertisements, we place it on record:

PART I.

Overture, "Semiramide" ..... Rossini
The Orchestra.
1. Largo al Factotum, from "Barbiere" ..... Rossini
Signor ROSCONI.
2. Prelude, "Mari" ..... Servais
Signor ARDITI.
3. Bel Raggio, "Semiramide" ..... Rossini
Mrs. CHARLES MOULTON.
4. Romanza, "Fleur que tu m'avais jetée" ..... Gounod
Signor LENEL.
5. Ave Maria, with violin obligato ..... Gounod
Mrs. CHARLES MOULTON.

PART II.

Overture, "Gazza Ladra" ..... Rossini
The Orchestra.

Mrs. MOULTON rendered "Bel Raggio" as we have not heard it before in a concert-room. Her purity and volume of tone, the surpassing finish of her execution, the amazing facility and unexceptionable elegance of her florid passages deserved and gained unanimous admiration. In response to the earnest demand of her auditors, Mrs. MOULTON then sang a French chansonette, with an archness and gaiety in admirable contrast with her opening effort. Signor ROSCONI was heartily welcomed, and trolled forth the well-worn "Largo al Factotum" with much of his old voice and all of his old humor and fire. In the "Ave Maria," and in most the best qualities of her voice, Mrs. MOULTON again won the hearty suffrage of her public, and the first part ended in quite a tumult of entusiasm. Signor PABLO SARASATE, of whom we should like to write more fully when more space is at command, proved himself an artist of high rank, and was heartily encouraged. The second part of the entertainment was as regards plaudits and universal satisfaction, a repetition of the first; and the opinion was generally expressed at the close that Mrs. MOULTON had made, in all respects, a great success.

Of all past singers, Mrs. MOULTON undoubtedly most recalls the traditions of MALIBRAN. The voice is a mezzo-soprano of exquisite purity, richness, sweet rather than strong, although of strength sufficient, very even in an extended range, and producing, when first heard, the kind of strange thrill of admiring exultation aroused by the first glorious bloom of Spring flowers, or the first view of a sublime landscape. What is the secret of this? Simply the revelation of a capacity for passion; a revelation conveyed by the most perfect of musical instruments, whose natural beauty has been brought to the rarest perfections without being hardened and worn away by the educating attritions. It is unnecessary to say to Mrs. MOULTON an amateur. She is already an artist in the fullest sense, since she can not only stand the test of rigid technical examination, but possesses the more splendid gifts that neither experience nor the most elaborate culture and labor can always confer. Doubtless, she may improve upon herself, and we greatly mistake her if she does not feel that she should try. But Mrs. MOULTON, as she is, brings far more to delight and to teach into the concert-room than many a singer of long-won repute and extensive following. There are singers in plenty who can "execute;" the rarity is to find a singer whose execution has a soul behind it; and between some of these artists and Mrs. MOULTON, there is much the same difference that exists between a musical-box and a sky-lark.

It is easy to comprehend, after hearing this very gifted lady, how the veteran maestro, after the same experience, should have exclaimed, "Voilà la voix!"—should have said that this was the voice that sang to him in imagination while he was composing. With such a voice he would have endowed his Mathilde, and it alone, even without the singular personal beauty that accompanies it, would have warranted the passion of Arnold. Of Mrs. MOULTON'S probable success on the operatic stage we are only able to form plausible conjectures; but of her triumph in the concert room there can be no two competent opinions. Indeed, if the sympathetic and spiritual qualities of vocalism are to be assigned their true relative place and value, Mrs. MOULTON in this field might almost be called "The Singer" in the sense conveyed by the Gre

There will also be "Il Trovatore," in Italian, at the Academy, on Saturday evening. The cast of which will be commenced on Thursday.

"MACBETH" AT BOOTH'S THEATRE.

Miss CUSHMAN appeared last night in the character of Lady Macbeth for the first time in ten years. Mr. CRESWICK played Macbeth and Mr. D. W. WALLER Macduff. The house was moderately filled by a not very enthusiastic audience, and it was only after the sleep-walking scene that a feeble call brought Miss CUSHMAN before the curtain, where only the ghost of that applause awaited her that in the old time used to greet the most famous part of a famous performances. Whatever faults may be found with the acting of the greatest tragic actress—we might almost say the greatest tragic actor—that America has produced, it can never be said of her that she is wanting in originality of conception. She is one of the makers of manner; she is not a copy, vigorous or feeble, of the manners of any other. Time with his stealing steps, may pass his hand over her hair and streak its dark with gray; he may dull the fire of her eye, and veil that most sympathetic voice, but to the last, something would be left of the essential fire with which she used to set our hearts aglow, and the intellect that has informed so many characters with life would still create and still interpret, as long as the body would obey her imperious and exacting will. Last night she justified what we are saying by the clear and vigorous setting forth of her interpretation of a part which in her prime taxed her powers to the utmost, and which in all its essential elements was yet the same now that it was ten years ago. The woman is not the same; the body is not now the servant it once was to her spirit; but the spirit is as high, the intellect as bright, the memory as retentive as ever, while that justness of judgment which was always, to our thinking, her chief excellence, has grown stronger and clearer, if that were possible, with years. But we will not counsel that Miss CUSHMAN does not seem to us entirely great in the character which among her personations of SHAKESPEARE'S masterpieces has been considered by the general public as her noblest achievement. With her reading of the part, he must be a fastidious critic who would find much fault. She is the only actor that we in America have known who represents the Lady Macbeth that SHAKESPEARE drew the only one whose interpretation does not make of that character a psychological monster. Whoever has studied most diligently, most thoughtfully what SHAKESPEARE wrote, will find that Miss CUSHMAN'S interpretation opens a new prospect and invites him with persuasive authority to new study and new investigation. No, it is not in her reading that this great actress makes us doubt—it is in her personal ability to set the mighty Queen of Hell before us, that we find her wanting. She cannot displace the figure of SIDDONS with which tradition has filled our imagination; their acts are certain gestures, certain movements that, grateful as it is to us to write the word, vulgarism her presentation of a part in which, if we could close our eyes and listen to her voice alone, we should feel that she is almost perfect. We cannot do more than hint our objection; it is not greatness on this occasion to do more than hint at a fault, especially when it is too late to mend it, but it is a fault that has always marred for us an, otherwise noble performance. If we may speak frankly, we should say that the quality of the audience last night found its natural explanation in the Macbeth of Mr. CRESWICK. Such a performance of this character it has never been our misfortune to see on any stage. It seems too much to say, but we think we are justified in affirming that out of three points made by SHAKESPEARE, Mr. CRESWICK missed two, and that he never on any occasion laid the stress on the right word. It was a curious, but painful study, and left us in a bewildered state of wonder as to the source of Mr. CRESWICK'S reputation. The gentleman's face is wanting in power and expression; his voice is thick, and his gestures conventional or unmeaning, and it seems impossible to goad him into action. Not until the sword-fight with Macduff did he seem to wake up to his work, but we may give him this praise, that nothing in his play became him like the leaving it. Mr. WALLER'S Macduff has good points, and if he would trust more in the power of simple nature, and forbear rant altogether, he would be a better actor.

We wish we had more time to speak of the admirable way in which the play was put upon the stage. It was a great rebuke to miss the Witch dance and music that deformed the performance in the old time, and the Witches themselves were better than they used to be, though they showed little sense of the music there is in their grim catalogue of ingredients for their cauldron. For the first time, too, we had the part of the Porter restored to its place, and very well did Mr. R. CHARLES present the only character in the play to whom SHAKESPEARE permits a little mirth—the one gleam of humor, and that rather a dreary one, in what is else all gloom.

What are Senator Morton and the Tammany Republicans Doing?

From the New-York Standard, Oct. 16.

There is no reason why the Republicans should not carry New-York. There is a spirit of resistance to the Democracy in the land. The contest between the two representative Administrations—that of Tammany and that of GRANT—is too marked for the people to hesitate. In Ohio, notwithstanding the local quarrels about the Senatorships; in Pennsylvania, with a discontented party in Philadelphia, an unpopular and inefficient State Administration, and suspected corruption in many counties—those have been triumphs as marked as any gained during the excitement of the war. Here in New-York the Democratic Party is in revolt against Tammany, even as eminent a leader as Mr. TILDEN making public declaration that he will not support Mr. TWEED'S local nominations. We should have the State Republican by twenty thousand. We should not be surprised to see it go Democratic by a very small majority.

There is very little real organization; very little apparent work. Mr. CONKLING, with characteristic eloquence and intrepidity, has opened the campaign in a remarkable speech. Mr. CONKLING is a great man, has prodigious capacity for oratory, and is always welcome to the people. But Mr. CONKLING alone cannot make this campaign.

Where is Gov. FENTON? He has had many honors from the Republican Party. He has great influence. Behind him is a large following of friends. His work in the campaign now would have rare value. Is it possible that because of a quarrel about discipline and Federal appointments, Gov. FENTON will pout in his tent when the battle is on, and take no heed of the fray? Whether the Convention did well or ill, his friends accepted its decision, and they owe it to honor and common party fealty to come out and work. Let Gov. FENTON do this, or no longer hold the office of Senator, given to him by Republican votes.

Where is Mr. GREELEY? He is not went to meet while the armies are contending. He edits a newspaper, to the support of which many hundreds of thousands of dollars have been paid by the Republican Party. He is an officer of the party and has weight in its councils. Where else has the Tribune done in this campaign? Its most conspicuous efforts have been made to show that Mr. DWIGHT—a leader of Tammany—is a model city officer, and that Mr. MURPHY—a leader of the Republicans, and as old and consistent a member of the party as Mr. GREELEY himself—should be in prison. Is this the way to win the canvass? If any man but Mr. GREELEY were doing it, we should hear the cry of treason in every column of the Tribune. The party has a right to expect better things from Mr. GREELEY. We know that he wants to defeat GRANT; that he has the immediate representative he was a bolter from in the State Convention in company with men whom he had denounced as the spies and slaves of Tammany. But his dislike to GRANT is no reason for his disloyalty to the party; and if his immediate representative was indorsed by Mr. LANGDON and others to be run as foolishly as a yearling heifer, he had only to discover the peanut of his simple-minded benchman and walk right into the thickest of the fight. We do not know Mr. GREELEY'S immediate or ultimate purposes in this canvass. But he cannot afford to ignore this canvass or betray it, and many good Republicans censure him for not doing one thing or the other.

Whatever the general may be in New-York City, the country has no concern with them. The country sees that upon the issue presented by GRANT'S Administration, and the ormess of Tammany, New-York may be carried as decisively as Ohio and Pennsylvania. And woe to the men, however illustrious or powerful, who permit their private or disappointed ambitions to weaken their zeal now. The Republicans can carry New-York, if they mean to do it. But they have not shown their faith by their works as yet.

Cause and Effect.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

The Tribune calls a contemporary the oyster-plant of journalism. That is nothing to the Tammany "plant" of journalism—a "plant" the "honest" Hank SMITH Republican Tribune has found so productive that, even in this darkest hour of the Ring, it is enabled to print to-day no less than seven columns of Tammany advertisements received from OAKEY HALL & Co.

NOTES OF TRAVEL.

DENVER, Wednesday, Oct. 4, 1871.

On coming down from the mountains, I found the great Fair in full blast. On the second day there was some very exciting trotting-matches between Colorado Chief and Richard the Third. If the horses were not quite equal to Dexter and Goldsmith Maid, our crowd was quite as enthusiastic as a Long Island crowd could be, and bets were lively. I observed one venerable man betting with a small boy, in an instructive moral way, and when his horse won he pocketed the little fellow's three cents "with a smile that was child-like and bland." There was some good running of handsome horses, but how restive and fiery they were, and how many men it took to hold them, ridden by gayly-costumed young jockeys, quite in the style of our pious ancestors. There were mule races, wild and laughable, and on the last two days "the Ancient Tournament," and racing by "friendly Utes." In the Tournament appeared gay young knights, gorgeously appareled, of all known and unknown orders, who, with gleaming lances tilted gallantly not at one another, but at rings suspended over the track, before the judges' stand—and a Scotch knight, a modest youth of seventeen summers, having borne off the most rings, was at last declared victor, and crowned with a resplendent wreath which he afterward, under the direction of the herald, or marshal, placed on the fair head of his chosen "queen of love and beauty," all of which was very fine and feudal, and suggested Ivanhoe, and Eglinton, and Ashby.

The Indians were to race for two dazzling prizes—a saddle and a bridle, manufactured especially to suit their sumptuous taste. They were a rather melancholy band of Utes, mounted on sorry ponies, and some came on the ground accompanied by their squaws and papposes, wearing like them no appearance the reverse of festive. The Ute is of a squat figure and of a broad blank countenance. It is difficult to tell the mounted braves from the wild belles who gallop through the streets with them, for alike they wear rouge and ear-rings, part their back hair and ride astride. With my advanced ideas on the woman question, I have been gratified as this indication of natural equality—gratified to see that the noble red woman so nearly resembles the stern lord whose burdens and blows she bears; that her countenance is marked, equally with his, by that lofty stoicism and quick sensibility, that princely pride and native modesty, that keen-eyed sagacity and childlike trustfulness, that matchless subtlety and fearless honesty, that iron resolve and plastic gentleness, which we read of in the pleasing romances of COOPER and the Peace Commissioners.

The first preparation made for the race, by the Indian competitors, was the stripping off of saddles and all unnecessary ornaments from their ponies, and the discarding of a large portion of their own classic drapery. It was an audacious undress parade. The ponies thus lightened, ran astonishingly well, and the prizes were borne off by the victors in stolid triumph. All the Indians, to my surprise, rode in solemn silence. I was afterward told that the usual savage yell had been prohibited by the marshal. It was one of the reserved rights of the civilized Caucasian crowd, and you would not have known theirs from the native article.

In the next day's race, one of the two best ponies balked, when about half round the course, and the singular sight was presented of the rider of the other horse pulling up, and waiting till his rival should be able to go on. Here is a fact for the philanthropists and a lesson to the Christian jockey.

Just before the Indians started on the first race it was perceived that the iron tournament rings hanging over the track had not been removed. They were hastily taken down, and, perhaps, a sad accident averted. Ah, had the danger been overlooked—had the poor Indian, over the victim of "Rings," dashed out his brains against one of these, what a sensation it would have created in exalted Eastern circles—what a story would have gone forth of the unsuspecting Ute, decoyed into the fair-grounds, and "butchered to make a Denver holiday."

There was the usual display of lady equestrianism—a good deal of solemn cantering around the track, and up and down before those awful judges—and all was very proper and common-place, except the performances of a certain young lady, who rode "a bare-back act" on a spirited white horse, which she sat with the utmost ease and dignity, and managed admirably. Unlearned in the mysterious ways of Fair Committees, I supposed that here was, of course, the "elect lady," who would take the first prize by acclamation. But she did not take it—nor the second—nor the third. I should have liked to set those inscrutable judges, and that gay young man, the marshal, each on a bare-backed, high-mettled steed, and I would have compelled them to ride sidewise and incumbered with a long heavy skirt. After galloping and carracoling about that course for a few times, I think their respect for such performances would have increased. But, perhaps, they thought bare-back riding something unfeminine and reformatory, and were of the opinion that the side-saddle was one of the sacred emblems of a model woman's lop-sided sphere. But, for all that, I hold the lady displayed rare horsemanship.

I have dwelt much on the equine character of this great occasion, because, like most State and County Fairs nowadays, it was little more than a grand horse-show, with an agricultural attachment, and some original and ab-original features.

Still, the buildings devoted to farm products and mineral specimens, were always crowded, and were to me by far the most interesting departments. I had seen elsewhere as grand-looking stock, but nowhere on earth had I ever beheld such immense, such Brobdignagian vegetables. Think of early potatoes, sound and sweet to the core, weighing six pounds apiece! Consider a turnip, weighing twenty-two pounds! Bring your mind up to a cabbage of fifty pounds! Shudder before an awful blood-beet of sixteen pounds, and make obeisance before a pumpkin actually weighing 190 pounds! I really reverences that pumpkin, that mountain avalanche of Summer sunshine. I would make a pulpit of it, or the platform of a Woman's Rights Convention, or put it to some other sacred and dignified use. Think of Spanish cucumbers by the yard, and wheat, oats and barley more than six feet tall. You need not be surprised to have a Colorado friend write to you from this ranch in this wise: "Sitting in the cool shade of a stalk of barley growing by my door."

In examining some beautiful specimens of grains, I fell into conversation with the exhibitor and producer, a fine-looking ranchman, named EVERETT, an intelligent, thoughtful, independent farmer from Ohio, where "they make 'em;" and the story of his first enterprises and struggles of a Colorado ranch was more interesting to me than the most thrilling novel by MARY J. HOLMES or HENRY WARD BEECHER.

The display of gold and silver ores was astonishing, and must have been very tempting to one who would "make haste to be rich," knowing not through what weary, painful days, with what wasting fever-dreams, what sickness of "hope deferred," the sky vein is followed to its deep, dark, secret lair, and by what fierce toil its precious prey is torn from its granite jaws.

After all, the finest part of the show, affording the most interesting studies to me, was the crowd of people. Such an immense gathering, and augmenting on each of the five days of rural revelry—and such infinite variety. There were the rich and fashionable in elegant turnouts; there were well-dressed ranchmen, with their families, in heavy wagons; miners on horseback; tourists, journalists and mine superintendents looking at ores; Mexicans, with wild yet sleepy, dark faces, costumed roughly yet picturesquely in prevailing tints of brown—very much such figures as I once saw at the Italian Fair of Grotta Ferrata; Chinamen, gliding about in their silent, deprecating way, with their mild, melancholy faces; Indians, with their broad faces painted out of their natural resemblance to humanity; colored citizens, escorting their families, with a glad sense of undisputed ownership, lifting up their heads in the yet fresh air of the Fifteenth Amendment; brave, healthy-looking young housewives, inspecting the fruits and flowers, and sewing-machines; nice elderly ladies, examining the prize quilts and dairy products; pretty, smiling furis, with their gallant rustic attendants; and, best of all, rosy, chubby, happy children everywhere. Once, in making our way into the dining-hall, we got into a fearful crowd of hungry people, which faintly reminded me of scenes at the great Inauguration Ball, and I shuddered to think to what depths of metropolitan and federal rudeness and barbarity even this virtuous and courteous people might come, under similar circumstances. But at all other times this great assembly seemed to me wonderfully pleasant, orderly and kindly. It was made up, in great part, of strong, hardy, earnest and intelligent-looking men—excellent representative men, of this noblest of the Territories. As I regarded them, I could but think it hard that they should be cut off from any of the political privileges and dignities of American freemen—that after adding so much to the wealth of the Republic, after having rallied so bravely for her defense—they should see their beloved Territory barred year after year out of her bright company of sovereign States.

In fact, I hear dissatisfaction expressed on all sides with the existing political condition—and this sort of semi-vassalage of a people, strong enough in character, wealth and intelligence to govern themselves, does seem, at the best, an anomaly, under a republic, a form of government whose very name implies that it is "a thing of the people." It is hard that a splendid young province, with, as Mickey FREE says of Charley O'Malley, "as much divilment in him as thim that is twice his age,"—is compelled to thus "tarry at Jericho till his beard be grown." I understand now why suffrage was first granted to woman in a Territory. "A yellow feeling makes us wondrous kind."

I doubt not that political critics here are harder in their judgments on Governors, and other officers appointed by the President, than they would be on men of their own selection and election. Even the Indians are critical. Their favorite was that general favorite in Colorado—Gov. HUNT. Of him, a shrewd Ute Chieftain once said—"Heap 'how!'—heap swap, heap biscuit—Good!" When asked his opinion of Gov. MCCOOK, his dark brow lowered, as he replied—"He! No 'how!' no swap, no biscuit." At the name of Gov. EVANS his haughty lip curled—his eye flashed scorn—"Ugh!—heap 'how,' no swap, no biscuit, d—n!"

It seems to me that this "satrap system," as I hear it called here, can best be defended on the principle of Guizot, that "the best Government for the people is that which the people like least."

I sincerely hope that when Colorado comes into her appointed place among the sovereign States, she will not be beguiled by demagogues and political tricksters, but will choose for her rulers and representatives, true representative men, actual settlers and pioneers—men who in the early, tumultuous, critical times, established and defended law and order, often at the risk of their lives and property. There are among these same "old pioneers" men yet in the prime of life, who know these mountains as TELL knew the Alps, and BRUCE knew the Highlands—who love Colorado with a proud, manly devotion—who understand her resources, her interests, and her needs, as no new-comer can, and whom she should honor, as they have honored her. Were I not afraid of the charge of presumption, I think I could point out a few men of this sort. I certainly would put to all Denver candidates for the United States Senate or House of Representatives, a few questions like these:

"Do you remember the great flood?" "Can you say of the great Mexican-Indian scare, 'All of which I saw, and a part of which I was?'" "Did you help try or hang the murderer YOUNG?" "Were you at JACK HENDERSON'S house-warming?" No candidate not answering in the affirmative could pass.

I shall be obliged to leave Colorado without seeing Pike's Peak and the Garden of the Gods. The cold I took in coming down from the mountains resulted in quite a serious illness, which almost laid me aside altogether. Colorado catarrhs, like Colorado cabbages, are monsters of their kind. I hope I shall live through mine—that it is giving way at last. It may have saved me from something worse—asthma, for instance. But it has not exactly rejuvenated me, made me stronger than I was before, on platforms and constitutional amendments—in short, has not done all for me that a stroke of paralysis does for a great statesman.

It may be that heretofore my descriptions of life in Colorado have been colored too much by my own pleasant personal experiences. Other tourists less fortunate or enthusiastic than I might tell a slightly different story. A friend now living in Georgetown told me the other day that he was once so unlucky as to travel from Cheyenne to that place, just behind Vice-President COLFAX, Mr. BOWLES, Gov. BROSS, and others—a large party of gentlemen and ladies—and that he actually suffered for lack of food. Now, it is easy to understand how Colorado, a land fruitful in delight to those distinguished locusts, should wear quite another and a more prosaic aspect to the poor fellow who followed and starved in their track.

But, well fed, well cared for, in sickness and in health, I can only paint the Territory as I see it—full of beauty, and grandeur, and promise, and the people, as they have shown themselves to me, full of kindly and generous sympathies. If this be exaggeration, citizens of other Territories must make the most it.

I must not omit to mention an imposing and important ceremony which lately took place in this vicinity. A party of clergymen assembled on the very summit of a certain lofty eminence, and just at sunrise solemnly dedicated the Rocky Mountains to the Lord. It were no light undertaking to forsake a comfortable bed, and make that steep ascent on a donkey and an empty stomach in the dreary morning twilight, and chill mountain air; and none but a body of pious, devoted men, bent on a great work of practical benevolence, a wholesale missionary enterprise, could have been equal to it. But now it is done, and we may hope that stock-rambling, and all other forms of gambling—all "wild-cat" operations, all unbrotherly "jumping" of claims—all whisky-drinking, Sabbath-breaking and profane swearing will speedily cease throughout that vast consecrated region. We may expect the heathen Utes to "come in," and look for larger Republican majorities than ever. In short, I shall leave the Rocky Mountains, feeling tolerably easy in my mind.

SOUTH AND CENTRAL AMERICA.

Peruvian Politics—Proposed Division of Chili into Federated States—Watching the Virginius at Aspinwall.

LIMA, Sept. 28, via KINGSTON, Oct. 16.—Affairs are quieter here than at the date of our last dispatches. The Ministry remains unchanged. There is great excitement at Huacho over recent gold discoveries in that vicinity.

SANTIAGO, CHILI, Sept. 16, via KINGSTON, Oct. 16.—Rich deposits of gold and copper have been discovered near Iquique. Chilian produce to the value of $1,700,000 has been shipped over MEIGS' railways for Peru. Heavy rains and severe frosts had been experienced, but the crops are not damaged thereby. There are rumors of troubles between Chili, Peru and Bolivia, but nothing definite is known. The new Government contemplates dividing the country into independent States. The small-pox is epidemic throughout the country.

THE FISHERIES.

A Tempest in a Tea-pot—The Escaped Schooner Merton Pursued by a British Man-of-War.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 16.—The report that an English man-of-war is cruising in the Bay between Cape Cod and Cape Ann to intercept the fishing schooner E. A. Horton, of Gloucester, has created considerable excitement about town today. This schooner was seized and taken into Gayshoro, N. S., for violation of the Fishery laws, and was awaiting the decision of the Vice-Admiralty Court. An evening paper says that a week ago last night she was cut out by unknown parties, supposed to be American seamen, and no trace of her was left beyond a portion of a cable. It is thought that the British authorities concluded that she was brought to Gloucester, and sent the man-of-war in pursuit of her directly here. The matter has been brought to the attention of Collector RUSSELL, and also to President GRANT. Collector BABSON, of Gloucester, and other Cape Ann men, have been in town during the day to ascertain what is to be done in the matter. In Gloucester especially there is much concern.

Opening of the German Parliament—Speech of the Emperor William—British Regulations for Presenting Alabama Claims—Rumored Disturbances in Corsica.

BERLIN, Oct. 16.—The Emperor WILLIAM today opened the sessions of the Reichsrath in person. He began his address with a review of the past session of the North German Parliament, and of the course of German unification. The progress of this important policy and the present condition of united Germany, he considered eminently favorable and gratifying. Passing from this to the topics to be considered by the present session, he said its chief care would be the consideration of the Budget for the Empire. The advances made by the several States of the Confederation must be repaid out of the funds received from France as indemnity. The Budget must include the expense of settling the Government of the territory acquired from France. The Emperor expressed the opinion that a reorganization of the coinage of Germany is desirable. He said the Federal Council was at this time engaged in devising measures for the establishment of a gold-coin basis for a uniform system of German coinage. He also proposed, as a subject ripe for discussion, the securing a line of direct communication through Switzerland to Italy, to be so controlled throughout that the interests of Germany would be fairly considered. The foreign relations of the Empire, he said, were entirely satisfactory. There was no cause of anxiety in any quarter. Especially was the correspondence with Austria of a cordial nature, and the intercourse with that country was no longer shadowed by reminiscences of past conflicts.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—A supplementary edition of the Gazette, this evening, publishes the British Commissioner's regulations for presenting claims to be adjudicated under the Washington Treaty for damages done by the Alabama. It is rumored that Gen. IGNATIEFF has been charged by Prince GORTSCHAKOFF to contrive an occasion for an interview between the Czar and the Sultan.

PARIS, Oct. 16.—A rumor comes from Marseilles of political disturbances in Corsica. They are believed to be inspired by Bonapartist partisans.

A Great Republican Meeting in Madrid—Bold Sentiments Uttered.

MADRID, Oct. 4.—A great Republican meeting was held at the Circus, in this city, today. Señor ORENSE presided. Resolutions were adopted declaring that the party would offer undying opposition to every form of government for Spain which was not purely republican. Nevertheless, in waging such war upon non-republican principles, they would not violate the laws of the land. Several of the speakers were very pronounced in their expressions against the present Government. The most violent proclaimed their perfect sympathy with Republicans everywhere and with the International Society, and declared that the faith of the Republicans of Spain was identical with the doctrines of liberty and equal rights now rapidly spreading through all the countries of Europe.

Terrific Gale in Montreal and Kingston—Congregations Flying from the Churches During Service—Death of a Young Lady—The Boston Hold.

MONTREAL, Oct. 15.—A terrific gale set in yesterday morning, after a heavy rain all night, doing serious damage to life and property. A large number of wooden tenements were blown down today. About 2 o'clock the wind increased, and the brick walls near the gas building were blown in; also the walls of the new building on Dalhousie-street, from which several persons barely escaped. The roof of the new St. George's Church was started during the reading of the litany, the timber in the roof being green and the bolts somewhat loose. The consternation was intense, the people rushing out in the middle of the prayers. No damage, however, was done beyond fright. The cathedral spire rocked like a ship's mast. The congregation, terrified, left before the completion of the service. Miss ANNIE LOWE, the youngest daughter of JOHN LOWE, late of the Gazette here, was instantly killed by the falling of a tree while passing to a neighbor's house, a short distance from her father's house, in the city suburbs. The fatal cases are doubtless not many, but all are not yet ascertained. Many citizens are maimed by falling signs and cornices. Judge ATLWIN, one of the most brilliant Judges on the Canadian bench, died on Saturday.

KINGSTON, Oct. 15.—It has been blowing a gale here all day and yesterday. The steamers Corinthian, Enterprise, Dominion and America are obliged to lie over in consequence. Several vessels have dragged their anchors, but so far none are reported damaged. The schooner Caledonia is reported ashore at False Ducks, and the Queen of the Lakes at Long Point. It is thought the former is a total loss.

OTTAWA, Oct. 16.—An expedition to defend Manitoba from Fenian attacks will leave Collingwood next Friday under the command of Lieut.-Col. OSBORNE SMITH, of Montreal. The force will consist of about two hundred men, who have been enlisted for six months, with the option of remaining a year and receiving a grant of land similar to the volunteers of the first expedition.

Trial of George J. Botts, the Murderer of "Pet" Halstead.

The trial of GEORGE J. BOTTS for the murder of OLIVER S. HALSTEAD, on the 2d of July last, commenced in Newark yesterday morning, Judge DEPEW presiding. The room was filled, but not crowded with spectators, including a very few women. C. S. TITSWORTH, Prosecutor of Pleas, appeared against the prisoner, and CHARLES S. SPENCER, of New-York, and WM. B. GOULD, Jr., of Newark, for the defense. The prisoner was attended by two brothers, and appeared solemn, but not agitated. The jury was promptly secured, with a few challenges. TITSWORTH opened the case, and the testimony commenced, which is a recital of the facts as fully reported at the time of the murder. The case has not concluded.

Mr. BRENTANO, No. 33 Union-square, has received by the City of Paris a full supply of the English monthlies for October, including the Cornhill, Tyndey's, Dark Blue, London Society, Temple Bar, Belgravia, All the Year Round, Cassell's, &c., &c. The contents are for the most part fresh and piquant. In this and other respects Mr. BRENTANO will be found, as usual, in the front of the trade.

The Hanover Fire Insurance Company.

We have several times taken occasion to commend the business of underwriting as conducted by this sterling, always reliable, and liberally-managed Company. The terrible ordeal of the Chicago calamity, the most destructive to the underwriting interests ever known, has demonstrated that our commendations were just, and that the "Hanover" is reliable under any conceivable contingency.—Evening Express.

National Calamity.

MASSACHUSETTS INSURANCE DEPARTMENT, BOSTON, Oct. 12, 1871.

The appalling calamity at Chicago very properly commands even more than national consideration and sympathy. In addition to loss of life, loss of property and injury to business in its immediate locality. The sudden annihilation of many millions of insurance capital and surplus necessarily imposes unparalleled misfortune and financial embarrassment not only upon a large number of insurance companies doing business in Massachusetts, but upon thousands of families and individuals throughout the country largely or wholly dependent upon their income from insurance investments.

In responses, therefore, to frequent and anxious inquiries relative to Governmental position and purposes in this unprecedented emergency, and with the hope of restoring confidence among the insured, the Massachusetts Insurance Department, in the exercise of a broad and generous view of its official responsibility, will freely extend the utmost liberality which duty and equity may permit, in aiding companies to adjust their losses, repair or increase their capital, and in other ways to secure their financial reinstatement where practicable and possible.

THE QUEEN'S CUP.

First Race of the Series in the International Yachting Contest.

The American Yacht Columbia Victorious — The Livonia Half an Hour Behind — Scenes and Incidents.

After the long and apparently endless correspondence, it is a pleasant task to chronicle the details of the first of the series of matches for possession of the America Cup. The contestants agreed to sail a series of seven races, four out of seven to win. Three of these were to be sailed over the regular regatta course, three outside Sandy Hook Light-ship, and, in case of a tie, the seventh race will also be sailed outside the Hook Light-ship. The race over the New-York Yacht Club course was from an anchorage west of a flag-boat stationed near the Quarantine Landing, Staten Island, to the Red First-class Can Buoy west of South-west Spit Buoy, designated on the chart map as Buoy No. 16, passing it to the west and south; thence to the Light-ship, rounding it to the northward and westward, returning over the same course, passing to the east, going and returning, of all the buoys on the West Bank—viz., Nos. 13, 11 and 9—and to the westward of the flag-boat stationed near the Quarantine Landing.

The steamer William Fletcher, with the Committee and members of the Press on board, left the foot of Desbrosses-street at 9 A. M. yesterday. The Fletcher arrived at Quarantine landing about 9:40, and found the Livonia, Sappho and Columbia lying in readiness to start. The Committee were not long in deciding which boat was to represent America on the eventful day, and steaming up alongside of the Columbia, Mr. MINTON hailed Rear-Commodore OSGOOD and briefly announced the honor in store for him. While the two yachts were getting up their canvas, a number of steamers arrived, laden with excursionists to see the race. The steamers included the Magenta, D.R. Martin, Americus, Olive Baker, Sea Bird, Andrew Fletcher, Antelope, Arrowsmith, and others. The yachts Magic, Tarolinia, Madeleine, Tidal Wave, Fleur de Lis, and Cocoette were also lying around. The Columbia soon got up her mainsail, foresail, and gaff topsails, and in a few minutes the Livonia was likewise equipped and ready for the start. The following gentlemen were the guests of Rear-Commodore OSGOOD on board the Columbia: Commodore JAMES GORDON BENNETT, Jr., Mr. HENRY HARLEY, Mr. GEORGE W. WILSON, Mr. LESTER WALLACK and Captain COFFIN. Lord WALTER CAMPBELL accompanied Commodore ASHBURY in the race. The sloop Anna was anchored off Quarantine as the stake-boat, in charge of Mr. DORLON, of Fulton Market. The wind at this time was about northwest, with a shade more northing, and the tide at the first of the ebb.

At 10:35 the flag was hauled down off the William Fletcher, the Committee steamer, and both yachts prepared to get under way. The Livonia had set two large square topsails, thoroughly characteristic of her nationality. Both vessels lay with their bows pointed to the Quarantine Landing, and all canvas set, with the exception of the jibs. They are rather similar in appearance, and both painted black with a gold line round the deck line. At 10:40 up went the flag on the Committee boat, and a long shrill whistle gave the starting signal. The Columbia ran up her three jibs simultaneously in a very smart style, and was under way before the Lavonia, who, however, tried to be smart by running up her jib clewed up, shaking it out when up. It was the difference in model, however, that really gave the Columbia such a good start, as her small draft makes her very quick to move, while the deep English keel-boat required considerably more wind to get her under way. The wind by this time had died away considerably, and there was only enough to keep all sails well filled. The Columbia had set main foresail, main foretopsail, three jibs and staysail. The Livonia had the same canvas up. Off the third landing, the Livonia boomed out her jib to try and catch a little of the breeze which was now dead aft. She was evidently too near shore, and the Columbia was rapidly slipping away with this light breeze. The Tidal Wave came up the middle channel with a party of guests on board, and having a good breeze, passed quietly ahead of the Columbia, who at this time was covered by Fort Richmond. As soon, however, as that point was passed, her big balloon jib came into use, as she caught the breeze and all her canvas filling as she luffed up a little, the chances of the Livonia appeared to grow smaller and more beautifully less. Both yachts were given plenty of room thus far, the excursion steamers keeping at a respectful distance, and allowing them a fair chance. By the time the Livonia had rounded Fort Richmond, the Columbia was about five minutes ahead, and rapidly increasing her lead. The decided advantage that the Columbia had already gained tended considerably to lessen the interest in the race, and it appeared very much, as Mr. STEERS quaintly pronounced it, "a very soft thing." Passing Quarantine Hospital, the Columbia was slipping through the water very nicely, with the Tidal Wave hanging on her leeward quarter, a position, however, which she did not retain long, but dropped quietly astern. The wind appeared to be getting very shifty, and off the hospital-ship the Columbia as nearly becalmed, and her balloon jib was made fly by the mast. There was not much more than four minutes' difference between the two yachts, and the Livonia appeared to be improving her position, although the gain was only just perceptible.

Passing the Red Can Buoy on the main channel, the Columbia still had a clear lead of a third of a mile ahead, and just enough wind to keep all canvas full. The Livonia did not appear to be doing quite so well and was observed to be gaining on the Columbia. As the Columbia came up toward the buoy, on the South-west Spit, the steamers all came up in that direction to give their passengers a chance of viewing the start from Buoy No. 16. As the Columbia came up she lowered her foretopsail, and rounding, jibed her mainboom and took down her staysail. They were very lively on board, and soon got the topsail and staysail set and drawing, and the Columbia started off lively in the direction of the point of the Hook. The Livonia came up about four minutes and a half later. On board the Livonia, as they jibed, they clewed up the foretopsail and lowered the staysail, and were a little quicker in getting them set and drawing, but they were considerably bothered with their balloon jib, which was rigged to the end of the jib-boom, and proved a rather unwieldy sail. The yachts rounded as follows:

	H.	M.	S.
Columbia	2	50	13
Livonia	3	19	55

As the yachts approached the Lower Bay the scene became more lively, and numbers of small craft came out to meet the yachts on their road home. The Committee boat had to get up all steam to try and keep up with the Columbia, but in this instance wind was more powerful than steam, and the swift American yacht beat the power of steam. The Narrows presented a very pleasing spectacle, the waters all dotted over with small craft, anxiously looking out for the first boat, and each person on board the two American colors aboard, they sent up a cheer of welcome that must have gone home to the bottom of the hearts of the Columbia's crew. A stern chase is always a long one, and in this instance the Livonia must have found it especially so, as, instead of gaining, she was losing ground every minute. The Columbia kept her lead steadily, and moved gracefully through the fleet of vessels that were now congregated off Quarantine Landing. No boat was ever before greeted with such an enthusiastic reception, and as she passed the stake-boat the din was perfectly terrific. The Livonia did not arrive until a full half hour later, but received a warm welcome. As soon as the boats had arrived the steamers and spectator yachts all started off for home. The following is the official time:

	Actual Arrival. H.M.S.	Time. H.M.S.	Corrected. H.M.S.
Columbia—Rear Commodore J. Osgood	4 57 42	4 17 42	4 19 41
Livonia—Commodore James Ashbury	5 23 00	4 42 00	4 40 45

Which makes the Columbia the winner of the first of the series of races by 27 minutes and 4 seconds.

CHICAGO AND THE PULPIT.

Sermon by Rev. Geo. B. Draper, D. D., of Harlem.

In the TIMES of yesterday brief mention was made of an admirable sermon delivered on Sunday morning last by Rev. GEO. B. DRAPER D. D., Rector of St. Andrew's P. E. Church, Harlem. The following is a more extended report of the discourse:

Is it not strange that when our own community is being agitated as, in all the world's history, I venture to say, no other community ever had more reason to be, at the revelation of a system of the most unscrupulous and wholesale thievery carried on for years by a cabal of its rulers, it should suddenly be called upon to pity and do what it can to relieve the sorrow and suffering that has befallen another community through the most appalling calamity that was ever heard of! Is it not strange when we of New-York are so troubled—so beset at developments of selfish dishonesty in high places, which have made every man of us feel poor by what he has lost, anxious over the insecurity of what remains to him—horrified to discover that the foundation of all our confidence, that on which the columns of our social edifice do rest is bedded in nothing but a mass of slippery corruption as it not strange, I say, that then our sister City of Chicago should be visited—not with the disclosure of a hell-born crime, but with the coming down of a heaven-sent blow—with a conflagration, the extent of whose destruction we can best conceive by imagining everything in our own City, below Twentieth-street, from river to river, in ashes! Oh! my brethren, what contending emotions must have stirred the hearts of every man, woman and child as they opened your papers day after day last week and looked first on one page to see paraded in print the sickening detail of forgeries connived at and countersigned in our public offices, whereby millions of the public money has been stolen, and then turned to the other to read of the tens of thousands of homeless, houseless, starving, shivering, and penniless creatures, who but a day or two before and now only one short week ago, had as many comforts and blessings as yourselves. Was ever greater crime against property inflicting the fair fame of one city, associated in experience with a greater calamity to property, affecting the good fortune of another city? And now I ask, is there no lesson in this strange juxtaposition? That intended to call forth nothing but honest indignation and tender-hearted pity by turns—horror of one sort when we look at home—horror of another sort when we look abroad—the spirit to exclaim in one breath, "I do not wish to live; the world is so very wicked," and then in the next to add, "and so very broad-minded withal, that is not the reason of the contrast that exists to-day between our condition of the Eastern and theirs of the Western city, but the lesson may be found in a verse that by a striking coincidence occurs in the Epistle for this day.

"Let him that stole steal no more, but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth."

Yes, here we are taught to see that there is a real connection between Christian honesty and charity—that as balm is to the wound or medicine to sickness, so are the savings of the provident and conscientious workers to the woes of the needy and distressed. Here we are warned that unrighteous gain is not only an evil direct in the misery it causes, but also an indirect evil in the misery which it must fall to relieve, and the lesson is impressed upon us that honest industry is both the only good way and the only way to a good end. Thievery induces loss, in the first place, and then gives little or nothing for the relief of that need which it is its office to create. Diligence in honorable labor and fair dealing, on the other hand, almost infallibly produces substantial gain, not only for the individual but for society at large, and this is not incompatible but rather congenial with the motive to share the gain it produces with those who are unfortunately losers. These general principles we may gather at the very first glance from the text. They lie upon the surface. But now, my brethren, let us apply them to the case in hand, and the circumstances which are ours to-day. The words of our text apply to faults that are all too universal in these times: stealing! in making haste to be rich, without thinking to give the equivalent of labor for that we receive in gain. Stealing—in not choosing a really honest and in the best sense profitable calling in which to labor, and stealing in our selfish and extravagant modes of spending what we have earned. These are the counts, my brethren, in the charge which the text brings against us. We find them, every one, specified in the least offensive portion of the Apostle's words.

After elaborating these points, the speaker concluded as follows: The rich are becoming richer every day, the poor becoming poorer, more numerous, more needy, the gulf wider; the bridge that should span it more and more difficult to build. France can reach Italy through a mountain of rock. England reach France beneath the flowing sea. Modern capital and engineering can pierce or surmount or undermine any obstacle to make the way clear to bring between those who have money to buy and those who have goods to sell; but, alas! there is no human wealth or skill in these modern days that can reach through the bosom of the selfish or under the tide of this tossing and whirling sea of unpublicanism to make the way any shorter between the brother that feasts in a palace and the brother that starves in a tenement; between the sister that wraps herself in fur and velvet and the sister that shivers in rags. In the Church, even, it is no longer as it was in St. James' day, when the word that the rich man could do was to remand his poor brother to a lower seat in the same temple; for now he builds a church for himself, and bids his poor brother betake himself to—where, you can imagine. And in the world it is no longer as it was in the day of our Lord, when Dives sat at his table and doled his crumbs to the beggar at his gate, for now the crumbs go into the sewer, and the beggar is sent to the Almshouse. But, brethren, you exclaim, Christian charity is not dead yet. Ah, no indeed, it is not, but unless we heed these words of the Apostle, "Let him that stole steal no more," unless we labor more, and gamble and speculate and pull wires and idly wait for something to turn up less; unless we work that which is really good, make more of a conscience in the choice and the use of our ordinary calling; unless we are more simple and self-denying in our modes of life, make ability to relieve the need we not to indulge self without limit, the object of our toils and cares, charity will die, and nothing but the most tremendous judgments on the part of God will revive it. We know that it is His ordinance that the poor ye shall have with you always, and he has made it His ordinance that we may prove how the charity which he gives us in them may be sure that they are the fruits of that tree, and that the time has come for the whole tree to be cut down—for the ax of the Judge to be ringing no longer among the little branches to prune, but resounding on the mighty trunk to say repent or I destroy. My brethren, have I misinterpreted the signs of the times? Is God's voice to us to-day—"Let him that stole steal no more, but rather let him labor, working with his hands the thing that is good, that he may have to give to him that needeth. Is it not a time to frown down and do away with, so far as every man's individual influence and good example can do it, the spirit of reckless self-indulgence in that that is really no profit to society, all extravagant and selfish spending and the spirit which leads to these things, and the spirit which these things engender, when he that needeth is not a single applicant, with a single want, which, perhaps, a single dollar will relieve, but a population of a hundred thousand souls who have neither food, clothing, shelter, or the means, nor money, nor employment, and the frost and cold of Winter coming on—was ever a greater trial of our charity, and could it ever have come upon us at a more needed time? Or, brethren I say it indeed prove true that the miracle of this day's Gospel is now to be repeated in our land and season, and we are sicken of the very wine which our sins has brought upon us, and have been thinking we were powerless to help ourselves or others, the voice at this Providence has come to us to say, "Here is thy opportunity for the charity that shall cover the multitude of thy sins and make thee well. Arise and improve it, even as the healed one arose, at the voice of the Master, took up his bed and walked." It is glorious to see what has been done already, brethren. It makes one feel proud of our country and our kind; and if the good work goes on to the issue that it promises, the multitude of the world may marvel again, and glorify God for having given such power, in charity, through Christ to men.

CALIFORNIA.

The Judicial Election on Wednesday—Names of the Opposing Candidates.

California will elect to-morrow, Oct. 18, two Justices of its Supreme Court, one for the full term of ten years, and one for the remainder of the term vacated by Judge SANDERSON'S resignation, and temporarily filled by Executive appointment. The Republican candidates are A. L. RHODES, of Santa Clara, and A. C. NILES, of Nevada. Mr. RHODES is now Chief-Justice of the Supreme Court. He was elected one of the Associate Justices when the Court was reorganized under the constitutional amendment in 1863, and drew the short term, which expires on the first Monday in January next, and has since been elected re-spectively for two, four, six, eight and ten years. The period for each was determined by lot, they holding rank as Chief-Justice successively by seniority. Judge RHODES is now a candidate for the full term of ten years, and Judge NILES for the remainder of SANDERSON'S term. The San Francisco Bulletin says: "The Chief-Justice is universally recognized by the Bar as a man of solid attainments, of unswerving devotion to judicial duties, and thorough integrity. He also enjoys in a high degree the esteem of his brother Judges. He will be supported by many outside of the Republican ranks, who believe that a capable and honest Judge should be retained in the place he honors, when there is no unusually strong counter-calling indication of political unrest." Judge NILES has occupied the county Bench of Nevada for many years with a credit to himself and satisfaction to the public, and was the unanimous choice of the Republican State Convention for his present candidacy.

The Democratic candidates are SHELDON S. WRIGHT and JACKSON TEMPLE, for the long and short terms respectively. Both are residents of San Francisco, highly capable and esteemed, and both have had judicial experience, Judge TEMPLE being now on the Superior Bench by appointment.

The State will also elect to-morrow its Superintendent of Public Instruction. H. N. BOLANDER is the Republican candidate for this position, and O. P. FITZGERALD the Democratic.

The result of these elections ought to be a Republican victory. The full official vote of the election for Governor last month has not yet been published; but the Sacramento Union has given complete returns from the several counties, which, it claims, are very nearly correct. These show a total vote of 136,000, the largest ever thrown in the State, of which the Republican candidate received 82,582, and the Democratic candidate 57,514; Republican majority, 5,068.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The following is a summary of the business transacted at the Exchange yesterday:

MULLER, WILKINS & Co., at public auction, offered for sale three first-class three-story high-stoop brick houses (brown-stone trimmings) and lots, located on the south side of One Hundred and Twenty-sixth-street, 225 feet west of Second-avenue, and known as Nos. 228, 230 and 232. The premises were offered subject each to mortgages amounting to $7,875, and knocked down respectively for $9,000, $8,400 and $8,000 to T. H. FARROW, C. L. MEAD and JOHN BLOXHAM. It really sold, the prices realized were very low. The same plan also offered at public auction ten stores and tenements, with lots, on the south-east corner of Third-avenue and One Hundred and Eighth-street, and a tenement-house and lot on the south side of One Hundred and Eighth-street, in rear of the above, but no adequate bids being received the entire property was withdrawn.

JOSEPH MCGUIRE, by order of the Supreme Court in foreclosure, under the direction of B. C. TRAVER, Esq., referee, disposed of a lot 25 by 100 with small frame building thereon, situate on the north side of Fifty first-street, 150 feet east of Seventh-avenue; purchased by JAMES WATSON for $1,600—a low figure—but as stated by the auctioneer, the property was sold subject to all liens and assessments of any name or nature which might be in existence against the same.

The legal sale of two houses and lots on Centre near Pearl-street, under the direction of RICHARD C. SEAMEN, Esq., referee, did not take place as announced, the property being withdrawn, and the business of the day was closed by ALBERT H. NICOLAY, who, at a stock sale, sold 100 shares of the Harlem Gas-light Company—par value $50 each—at 75 per cent.

In suburban sales, that at College Point, Long Island, conducted by JOHNSON & MILLER, was the only one to occur, the result of which will be given to-morrow. In the matter of private sales none of recent date are reported, but in this connection we would call attention to City houses and lots offered in this way through our advertising columns by E. H. LUDLOW & Co., No. 3 Pine-street; MULLER, WILKINS & Co., No. 7 Pine-street; V. K. STEVENSON & SON, No. 11 Pine-street, and F. G. & D. BROWN, No. 100 Broadway. Also, to the notice of the valuable property No. 6 East Twenty-third-street, a large double house, with lots running through to Twenty-second street, for sale or to lease for a term of years, for particulars in regard to which inquiry can be be made of G. M. SPEIR, No. 42 Wall-street.

The property known as the Passaic Mills, located in Newark, N. J., an immense building, thirteen stories in height, erected in 1866, was recently sold in that city at a foreclosure sale, for $100,000. The mortgage foreclosed was for $140,000, held by DAVID DOWS & Co., of this City. The property, it is said, was bid in by the mortgagees, two of whose reside in New-York and two in Cincinnati. The mills have not been operated since 1869.

For today at the Exchange a large number of important auctions, at which very valuable City real estate will be offered, are announced. A full list of the proposed sales, with details, was published yesterday, and to this list for information, reference is made. Today, also, at Yonkers, Westchester County, the great suburban sale of building lots by JOHNSON & MILLER takes place, a transaction which, should the weather prove pleasant, can hardly fail of success, as the property is about the nicest of the kind offered at auction since the season commenced. Sale on the ground at 12 M. Special tram from Hudson River Railroad Depot, Thirtieth-street and Tenth-avenue, at 10½ o'clock.

The following is the list of transfers recently made and recorded, as taken from the Real Estate Record of Saturday, Oct. 14, such transfers, however, only being noted where the value of the realty conveyed amounts to $25,000 or over. The list of recently-recorded leases is also appended.

GEN. GRANT IN BOSTON.

Laying the Corner-Stone of the New Post-Office.

Interesting Ceremonies—Address by Postmaster-General Creswell—Historical Sketch by Mayor Shurtleff—Brilliant Private Receptions to the President and Other Guests.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 16.—The first of the noteworthy ceremonies of this week which has called the President, the Vice-President and other dignitaries from Washington to New-England has taken place today. In accordance with the programme of the city authorities and national officials, amended at the thoughtful suggestion of President GRANT, so as to occasion as little parade and expense as possible in view of the great calamity which has overtaken Chicago, the corner-stone of the new Post-office and Treasury building—so like that in progress in New-York, one of the most elaborate and complete public structures in the country—has been laid. The day has been a holiday throughout the city, and the celebration has attracted crowds from the towns about. The exercises began with an imposing procession of cavalry and infantry, posts of the Grand Army, Commanderies of Knights Templar and the Grand Lodge of Masons escorting the President and the remainder of the Governmental party; the Governor of the State, the Mayor of the City and the prominent National, State and City officials participating in the ceremonies. This moved through some of the principal streets, which were lined with people, and in some instances were decorated with tri-colored bunting, to the square, the site of the structure. The President was repeatedly cheered as the procession proceeded, and his carriage, or at least the guard surrounding it, was besieged by a great crowd of curious and ill-mannered people, notwithstanding that this is his third visit to Boston.

THE SITE OF THE BUILDING.

The site of the new building is historic. It is in the oldest part of the town. Near by in former days was the residence of Gov. JOHN WINTHROP, the old meeting-house where JOHN WILSON and JOHN COTTON dispensed religious instruction, and later the birth-place of FRANKLIN, and the mansion-houses of JOHN BOWDOIN and ROBERT TREAT PAINE. In its very centre used to stand the mansion-house of Mr. BROWN, one of the most opulent merchants of his day, which in time, and by slow degrees, was transformed into the Stackpole House, in which capacity it became famous for its generous hospitality, its ripe old English wood cheer, and the long line of notable and cultivated company which tenanted it. Its wars and decayed remnants were only a few years ago removed, and, though it had fallen very far from its former glory, many bitter regrets were expressed by many of the men of old Boston, who recalled it old grandeur, and fondly dwelt upon its courtly mansion ment and its famous dinners. The new building is to be of granite, and elaborately ornamented. It is now raised for beyond the corner stone, but the forms were all observed as if the structure was not just commenced. The ceremony was delayed until this time to accommodate the engagements of the President.

THE CEREMONIES AT THE BUILDING.

The ceremonies attending the laying of the stone were performed from a high platform erected before the Water-street front. On this were assembled the President and the other distinguished guests of the City, including a large number of Postmasters of leading cities in the country, and in the streets directly surrounding it were grouped the bodies which had formed the procession, and behind them crowded many hundred people. The notable persons present were the President and Vice-President, Secretary Bolkman, Secretary Robeson, Postmaster-General Creswell, Senators Wilson, Sawyer and Cattell, Gens. Babcock, Porter and Ingalls, Commodore Steedman, Hon. William B. Washburn, and Congressman Dawes. The exercises here opened with prayer by Rev. Dr. E. B. LAUREMOR. Music followed, and then Postmaster-General CRESWELL delivered an address.

POSTMASTER-GENERAL CRESWELL'S ADDRESS.

Mr. CRESWELL first rapidly sketched the marvelous growth of the Post-office establishment, asserting in the outset, and demonstrating it by reference to the pages of history, that there never was a post-office worthy of the name until the people became potential in government, and then proceeded to give an advance statement from his next annual report of the work of the Department the last year. This stated that the number of letters transported and delivered during the year ending June 30, last, exceeded 600,000,000, and the newspaper and miscellaneous mails were ten times greater in both weight and bulk. There were in the postal service 42,084 persons, scattered over every part of the national domain from Sitka to Key West, and from San Diego to the St. John's, 11,322 more than the whole army of the United States. Of 1,643 post-offices in operation, 4,078 were money order offices, 1,000 having filled by appointments of the President, and 3,078 by appointments of the Postmaster-General. Comparing the business of 1871 with that of 1870, it is shown that in three years the increase of post-offices amounted to the increase of ordinary receipts to twenty-three per cent., and of expenditures to less than seven and three-tenths per cent. For the last four years the deficiency after deducting from the expenditures of each year the annual appropriation for free matter and special steam-ship subsidies:

For 1868.....$4,696,000 00
For 1869.....2,700,000 00
For 1870.....2,516,115 00
For 1871.....2,250,656 00

The appropriation for the deficiency for the last year was $2,695,322, of which $1,000,000 were expended. For the last three years there were appropriated, to the aggregate, for deficiencies $14,807,093, of which only $6,262,509 were expended, thus leaving in the Treasury, from the deficiency voted for the last year, $1,035,022, and from the deficiencies voted for the last three years, $8,526,584. Within the three years past, letter postage between all points in the United States and Great Britain and Ireland has been reduced from twenty-four to six cents, and equal reductions have been effected between the United States and Germany. A money order system between this country and Great Britain and Germany has also been effected. Negotiations which promise alike reduction of postage and other ameliorations, are now pending with the Scandinavian and other countries. In making these new arrangements the postal department merely consults, and are not responding merely to the demands of business, they are carefully providing for the scientific, literary, social and religious brotherhood of nations. Mr. CRESWELL brought his address to a close by a reference to Bunker Hill and the following words: Here, then, deep in the soil of glorious Massachusetts, almost upon the spot where BENJAMIN FRANKLIN first looked upon the light of day, and with hearts full of gratitude to the sages and heroes who, by their labors and sacrifices, made possible the liberties we now enjoy, we may well lay the corner-stone of this imposing edifice, Let it be as a monument of the all-pervading beneficence of the Republic. Let those who are charged with the construction see to it that it shall be worthy of our own times, and equal in its extent and appointments to all the reasonable demands of the future. May the light of peace and the spirit of brotherly love rest upon it and consecrate it forever to the diversified pursuits of the brave sons and loving daughters of New-England, and may we be able to conduct in such manner the service which this structure is intended for the most part to promote, that the people everywhere will accept and gladly retain it as their faithful friend and ally in every good work. But more than all may this great Government, which appears here to bless you with a generous hand, be so administered by him who now presides over it that the men of succeeding ages, when they turn to the history of their times, may read on one page the brilliant record of his military achievements and on another the less imposing, though equally magnificent triumphs of his civil career. And may there also

CLOSING CEREMONIES.

At the conclusion of this address Dr. N. B. SHURTLEFF, Ex-Mayor of the city, and a respected local historian, delivered an interesting historical address, in which he referred to the ancient buildings on this site, and pictured the postal arrangements in old Colony days. When he had finished he delivered the box and contents to be placed under the corner-stone. These included a great number of articles and documents which illustrate events and trade the history of the present day, and give all the information possible about the building and the men concerned in it. Then the Grand Lodge of Freemasons continued the ceremonies by laying the stone in accordance with the customs of the Order. The exercises closed with the singing of a hymn written by Wm. T. ADAMS, (known to the readers of juvenile literature as "Oliver Optic.") When all was over the crowd called for speeches from GRANT, COLFAX and others, but only Mr. COLFAX responded. He spoke very briefly, in fact but a half dozen sentences, mainly concerning the admirable postal system of this country.

PUBLIC AND PRIVATE RECEPTIONS.

A number of brilliant receptions have been held today and this evening. The first, by President GRANT, was given this afternoon at the St. James. He was assisted by Senator WILSON and Gov. CLAFLIN. Among the prominent gentlemen present were Hon. CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS, Ex-Judge HOAR, Hon. HENRY L. DAWES, Hon. JOSIAH QUINCY and Hon. ORSELOW STEARNS, Ex-Governor of New-Hampshire. At the same time Mrs. GRANT and the ladies accompanying her gave a brilliant reception in the drawing-rooms at the opposite end of the hotel, at which a large number of the wives of the prominent gentlemen participating in the day's ceremonies were present. Early in the evening the President gave a second public reception. Mrs. JULIA WARD HOWE entertained the ladies of the President's party at dinner this afternoon at her residence in Mount Vernon-street, and in the evening held a reception at which a brilliant and cultivated company was present. The President, Mr. COLFAX, Secretaries ROBESON and BELKNAP, and Postmaster-General CRESWELL made brief calls also for a few moments. President GRANT met the Methodist Social Union in Wesleyan Hall, by invitation of Gov. CLAFLIN, who is its President.

Among the prominent strangers in town tonight are Ex-Postmaster-General DENNISON and Hon. R. E. SMITH, of Ohio; Hon. H. H. NORTH, of Tennessee, and Gen. N. M. HALSTED, of New-Jersey.

THE PRESIDENT IN MAINE.

The President and his party go to Bangor tomorrow, and further East the next day, to take part in the ceremonies attending the opening of the European and North American Railway. When the train reaches Portsmouth, the President will be met by Senator HAMLIN and Congressman PERHAM, of Maine, and at the State line will be formally welcomed to Maine by Gen. HALL, of the Governor's Staff. Short stops will be made along the route. At Augusta Gov. PERHAM will meet the party, and there will be some speech-making. The reception in Bangor will probably attract one of the largest crowds ever assembled in Maine. There will be processions, banquets, and untold pleasures and honors.

A Sad Incident.

While the performance of "Don Juan" was progressing at the Academy of Music, last evening, Mrs. REGUIN received the tidings—wholly unanticipated—of the death of Mrs. JENNIE PRODEHAM, a married daughter, who perished a victim to the consequences of the Chicago disaster. Mrs. REGUIN sweeted on the receipt of the sad news, and was removed to her dwelling amid a general expression of sympathy.

In yesterday's TIMES it was stated, through mistake, that no collection had been made in the Fourteenth-street Presbyterian Church for the benefit of the Chicago sufferers. A collection of $230 was taken up on Sunday, and many of the members subscribed liberally through other channels. Arrangements have been also made to send a supply of clothing to aid the distressed.

The anniversary of the Young Men's Universalist Association, of this City, was celebrated last night in the Church of the Divine Paternity, corner of Fifth-avenue and Forty-fifth-street. Addresses were delivered by Hon. Horace Greeley, Rev. J. Smith Dodge, Jr., Rev. E. H. Chapin, Rev. George Hepworth, and Rev. Athanase Coquerel, fils, of Paris.

At the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, JOHN WALL pleaded guilty to manslaughter, having, on the 13th of June last, while engaged in a row with PATRICK CAHILL, at the Empire Livery Stable, No. 231 West Thirty-third-street, killed the latter by striking him on the head with a pitch-fork. Recorder HACKETT sent him to the State Prison for three years.

WM. H. BROWN, employed as a collector for DAVID D. TOUMANS, Baker, at Broadway and Twenty-fourth-street, was brought before Justice DOWLING at the Tombs, yesterday, charged with having on various occasions collected funds on behalf of his employer and appropriated the same to his own use. He was committed for trial.

LAWRENCE CASEY, JOHN CASEY and TIMOTHY KELLY, lads ranging from fourteen to sixteen years each, were arraigned before Justice DOWLING, at the Tombs, yesterday, charged with having, on Feb. 20 last, broken into the store of DUSSAUMIER & HUNT, Nos. 4 and 5 Astor House, and stolen $30 worth of jewelry and neckties. The accused were all committed to prison for trial.

Contributions in money for the relief of the sufferers by the conflagration that has nearly destroyed the City of Holland, Mich., and adjacent places, may be sent to JOHN R. SMITH, Treasurer of the Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed Church in America, at the office of the General Fire Insurance Company, No. 141 Broadway. Gifts of clothing of all kinds may be left at the Synodical Rooms of the Reformed Church, No. 24 Vesey-street.

The Board of Aldermen yesterday resolved to award the contract to the People's Gas-light Company for furnishing gas to the city at the rate of $3 75 per thousand feet, on condition that the Company refund the rate to $2 50 per thousand feet should the Governments repeal the tax on gas companies.

LONG ISLAND.

PETER MURPHY, of Flatbush-avenue, was fined $25 on Saturday last by Justice P. R. HENRYMAN, for cruelly beating his horse over the head and loins with the heavy butt-end of a whip.

The body of a newly-born male infant was found in the East River, near Hunter's Point, yesterday afternoon. The child was neatly wrapped in a fine linen towel, which, it is thought, will lead to the identification of the mother.

Yesterday the Queens County Court and Special Term of the Supreme Court commenced at North Hempstead, Justice TAPPIN presiding. The Grand Jury found a true bill of indictment against CHESTER WAGNER, the Newtown wife murderer.

The order of the President of Flushing village, which was intended especially to close up the liquor-saloons on Sunday, has an effect not expected. The news-stands, barber-shops, drug-stores and markets, which have been accustomed to keep open until 10 A. M., were all closed, and everyone seemed disappointed.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

The corner-stone of the proposed new Baptist Church at Sing Sing will be laid to-morrow. Rev. Dr. ARMITAGE, of New-York, is expected to deliver the address.

Archbishop MCCLOSKY is expected to visit St. Augustine's (Roman Catholic) Church at Sing Sing, today, at 10 A. M., and administer the rite of confirmation to a large number of young persons.

Messrs. N. Holmes Odell, F. M. Randall, John Beasley, and J. O. Miller have been appointed a committee of the Westchester County Agricultural and Horticultural Society to consider the propriety of holding a horse fair some time in the month of November.

NEW-JERSEY.

The Newark Common Council is about to purchase a plot of ground on Washington, Academy and Canal streets, for the purpose of erecting a city armory. The plot is to cost $34,000.

Yesterday afternoon a locomotive attached to a freight train on the Erie Railway was thrown from the track at the east end of Bergen Tunnel. A delay of more than an hour was caused before the obstruction was removed.

All voters in New-Jersey are obliged by the law passed last Winter to register today or on the 2d of November. Under the new law no foreign-born person can vote without presenting his own or his father's naturalization papers.

THOMAS MCMAHON, who was stabbed on Third-street, Hoboken, on Sunday, died yesterday, at his home, No. 29 Adams-street. MOSES HENRY, the other man who was injured, will not recover. Considerable mystery surrounds this affray.

The Newark Zinc Works will probably be stopped today, and 200 men thrown out of employment. The company have been using a patent furnace, which the Courts have decided they have no right to use, and the owners of which have demanded $600,000 indemnity from the Company. This the company will not pay, and will therefore probably stop the works.

A.—If there be any doubt of KNOX'S right to be pronounced an artist, that doubt will be at once removed by a visit to his splendid corner of Fulton-street and Broadway, and his well-furnished but emporium on Broadway, above Spring-street. In those two establishments are countless manifestations of his creative genius. His collection of hats affords considerable proof that he has been a careful observer of human nature, and a casual observer even will have no difficulty in detecting a peculiar appropriateness in the variety of his hats to the varieties of age and condition. Wherever they are designed for, whether the hat for the brusque and dashing beau; the modest beaver for the staid and retiring gentleman of domestic habits; the settled, sober, sedate castor for the middle-aged paterfamilias; the large families of hats which are ranged along his well-filled shelves. Truly, KNOX is a genius.

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

Intimidation.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

During the last month, while traveling in rural districts of the State, I have been much impressed with the intimidating influences of the course recently pursued by the TIMES, as an act of faith in the Republic. Most of us are too familiar with the cowardly assertion that the republican form of government has been fully tried and is a failure in its application to great cities—that there is no remedy for the rule of loosetown ruffians but lynch law, and so on—but I fear few of its readers to what extent the same form of demoralization extends to the country, and to where applied essentially without reserve. faith in self-government being practically almost extinct. At present, under the influence almost solely, as it appears, of the TIMES and of Mr. CURTIS, in Harper's Weekly, there seems to be a check to the retreating movement among the Republicans, a growing disposition to make a stand, but with the Democrats among whom I happen to have fallen, the contest with corruption seems so be universally felt to be hopeless. The expressions of two men, both of whom have formerly had considerable weight and influence, will indicate the prevailing ideas among the better class. Referring to the Rochester Convention, each expressed the conviction that in the end the more reputable men would be sold out to the more unscrupulous and audacious, "and," said one, "if by any chance, in the present fever the Convention can be wrought up to defy the Ring, it will not be a triumph of honesty but only of party policy. It will indicate that the defeated believe they have gone too far for safety, and that it will be better to be led in this campaign by men who have a little regard for a reputation for honesty, instead of by men who have none. The men who are leading in the fight with the Ring don't believe a pin more in honest elections and in honest legislation than the others. They have always used corrupt means to carry their ends in this State, and they have no idea of succeeding without them. They would despise any man as an impracticable and ignorant enthusiast who undertook to mix in politics without setting his fingers. The only difference between them and the Tweed and Sweeny gang is that they are more cautious and cowardly, and more dubious to cover their tracks. They are all, every man of them, old traders in votes, offices and contracts; they have formerly been successful, but Tweed and Sweeny have come in and by shrewd bribes to each man as Fish and STEWART and ASTOR and ROBERTS, have been able to use the larger capital, and to go into the business on a larger scale and with more daring, and they hate them for it. If there is any change to be made at this time, which I don't believe, it will only be a change of men." Speaking of the Committee of Seventy, said the other, "I have known most of them, and others for their character. I know that some of them have either behind me or before me in a fight. In fact, there's only one honest man in New-York, out of the TIMES office, if there are any there, who seems to have any real stomach for a fight; that's the fellow who took up DUDLEY FIELD last Spring—what's his name?—HARLOW. Yes, there's one more; he's the only one who took Orange with me unprotected. If there were a few men like him in your Committee of Seventy there would be some hopes for you."

The same ideas, though with less disposition to despair of the Republic, prevail with the Republicans. All have lost confidence in the old leaders, confidence in their sincerity, honesty and trustworthiness, and look for success wholly in new men with clean hands. It is complained that men whose reputation even out of politics is not unstained, are, at this crisis, as forward as ever in directing the canvass.

ONE OF THE REAR RANK.

Democrats All Betrayed.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

A well-considered article on the editorial page of yesterday's TIMES, entitled "How Tammany Carried the Convention," exposes the duplicity and simulation, as well as the cowardice, of that body as a whole. It is the purpose of this communication to show how some of the individual members violated their trusts and betrayed their constituency.

The County of Genesee was represented in the Rochester Convention by HENRY RICHMOND, son of that eminent Democrat, DEAN RICHMOND. At the County Convention which elected him a delegate the following resolutions were passed, viz.:

Resolved, That the object of political organization is to secure efficient and honest administration of Government; and

Whereas, The leaders and controlling spirits of the Tammany organization stand charged before the community with most flagrant frauds and corruptions in the administration of the Government of the City of New-York; and

Resolved, That these charges must be sustained in a preliminary examination before the judicial tribunals of the City; and

Resolved, That this Society must purge itself of this corruption and defend itself against these charges before it is again entitled to sit in the councils and assist in the shaping the policy of the Democratic Party of the State, and we call upon the State Committee to assemble on the 6th inst., in Rochester, to nominate candidates to be supported by the party in November next; not to determine these frauds, but to see to it that the authors of them are not admitted to seats in that body.

From these resolutions it is evident the Democracy of Genesee desired the frauds of this City to be determined, the perpetrators exposed, and rend out of the party, and the party itself thoroughly purged from taint by severing it from all connection with those against whom the least suspicion of guilt could be raised. They say that Tammany "must purge itself of this corruption and defend itself against these charges before it is again entitled to sit in the councils or assist in shaping the policy of the Democratic Party of the State.

Notwithstanding this strong and unmistakable language, the young representative from Genesee voted to keep out the Reform delegation, opposed to Tammany, and to unite all efforts to brand and stigmatize her with the infamy of her chiefs. The struggle on the part of Tammany at the Convention was not so much to get seats in it, as it was, first, to hush up all debate on the City frauds. Second, to prevent her opponents from gaining in, and thus secure to her the prestige of regularity, and by its charm preserve her organization. The result showed she was completely successful. But this is not all. Although she was not to have any voice "in shaping the policy of the party," we also see her dictated the ticket that was nominated. TILDEN, KERNAN, &c., &c., Democrats eminent alike for their integrity as well as learning and ability, endeavored to break the Tammany slate by nominating for Attorney-General the Hester of the New-York Bar, in place of TWEED'S tool, CHAMPLIN. Yet this young man from Genesee, instructed by his constituency to see to it that Tammany had no voice, influence or control in the Convention, opposed this nomination so passionately as to be made, and childishly said "he would take it as a personal insult if his friend CHAMPLIN was not nominated." The mantle of Elijah does not always fall upon Elisha, and the efforts of these sterling Democrats to "heaven the lump" proved abortive.

The Democrats of Genesee must see from this statement that the acts of their representative in the Rochester Convention, instead of rebuking, helped to shield Tammany and her "controlling spirits." And they are warned that the success of the Rochester programme, before the people, and especially the election of Tammany's protégé as the public prosecutor of the State, will allow the guilty perpetrators of those "flagrant frauds" to go scot-free.

DEMOCRAT.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, Oct. 12, 1871.

The Ring's Right Mower.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

You have now for three months been pursuing with your venom Messrs. TWEED, SWEENY, CONNOLLY, and HALL, and the other controlling officers of our City Government. You have accused them of stealing and misappropriating the public money. And to what end? Simply in hopes that you may depose them from office. But, Sirs, I think you will find, next month, that you have made a miscalculation. The Tammany Ring, as you are pleased to call them, have the full support of our Church at their back, and the Church never deserts its friends. Its friends are those who freely supply her with money, and these officials, whom you so denounce, have been among the foremost to give money or its equivalent to our Church. Did they not, with lavish generosity, give (or lease at a nominal sum forever) one of the most valuable pieces of the public property for our cathedral? Have they not for years paid, from the public funds, assessments against our church property and saviours? Have they not given, over and over again, valuable public property for our asylums and nunneries? Have they not, year after year, donated large sums of the public money to us? Did they not all respond promptly to the Archbishop's call (or order) for money to go on with our cathedral? Have they not done as our Church wished in regard to the public schools? Truly they have proved themselves our friends indeed, and shall we desert them now? No! You may say it is very easy to be generous with other people's money. But, Sirs, the Church—our Church—takes the money and does not look or ask where it comes from. It only knows that those who give so lavishly are its friends, no matter where or how they procure the money they pour into the treasury of Holy Mother Church.

And, Sirs, as I said before, you will find at the election next month that you have miscalculated in your hopes of putting down the men you are pleased to call thieves and plunderers. All the power and machinery of our Church is behind the present officials, and will support them. The inspectors are all right for us, the large majority being directly under the control and direction of our Church machinery. And as for voters, we can easily arrange that as we have done for years. We do not intend that Orangemen or Dutchmen shall control this city. It is ours, and we intend to retain our hold on it, and return in power those officials who so nobly respond to the requests (or orders) of our holy Church. S.

A Young Man's Letter.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Your appeal to the young men in today's paper would be really touching if it were less amusing. I have tried my head at the idea of honest young premier among a parcel of professional political rogues, and have found it to be mere vanity and vexation of spirit. Four or five years ago, when I was young and tender, I was inlaid with an alarming fit of patriotic fever, and arrived at the unanimous resolution that I ought to take an interest in politics. This resolution I immediately proceeded to translate into action by taking steps to become enrolled as a member of the Republican association of my district. The Republican Party had always been the object of my silent adoration. As a school-boy I had looked upon JOHN C. FREMONT as a second Washington, and later, when I was upon the threshold of manhood, I burned with indignation at the shameful manner in which WILLIAM H. SEWARD was defrauded of the Republican nomination in 1860. I do not know that any other public event ever moved me so deeply, unless it was the assassination of President LINCOLN. Being animated by such feelings, it was, of course, impossible that I should ally myself with any other party than the Republican. The district in which I lived happened to be one of the most respectable and one of the wealthiest in the City, and on a fair count would poll a Republican majority.

Some of the best known and most highly-esteemed citizens of New-York were among its residents, and I had a right to expect that I should meet with men of honor and culture if I entered the ranks of the party of progress and morality. What I did meet with was a number of persons whose manners and appearance were equally uninviting, and who impressed an unprejudiced observer, with the conviction that they entertained as insuperable objection to cold water, whether internally or externally applied. However, having frequently read about the "honest hard-handed sons of toil," I gulped down my misgivings and for a time ceased my vain regrets at the absence of the bloated bondholders from our deliberations. Through constant practice in a college debating society, I had acquired a fatal facility of slinging adjectives, and I soon secured a standing in our association by means of frequently rehearsing at its weekly meetings the articles which I had read in the Tribune of the same morning, and which I skillfully interlarded with grammatical improprieties, in order to avoid the injurious imputation of being an aristocrat. I was placed upon the Executive Committee, made a delegate to various county nominating conventions, and even offered a nomination for an office to which it was utterly impossible that any Republican should be elected. The latter honor I declined, acting upon the friendly advice of men older and more cautious than I then was. On this sort of footing I remained an active member of the organization for a couple of years, and came into contact with some of the most prominent Republican politicians of the State, both in and out of the City. Gradually my associates came to look upon me as a dangerous visionary, who committed the absurdity of prating of purity when the main question, of the hour was to outgeneral the enemy; under this appellation was understood, sometimes the Democratic Party, at others the rival wing of the Republican. I found upon mature deliberation that the men "inside politics" could be divided into two classes: those who were willing to commit fraud for their own benefit, and those who were willing to connive at fraud for the benefit of the party. As I did not belong to either class, I thought it my duty to vamose the ranch, as they say in Mexico. My view of the matter was, and still is, that if the Republican Party cannot carry an election without resorting to the same disreputable tactics which have made the Democratic Party stink in the nostrils of honest men, it is much better to let the Democratic Party carry it. The view which the other fellows took was that I was that friend of Doestocks whose name is not fit for ears polite. I suppose I was, to imagine that a Republican politician was not tarred with the same stick as one of any other party.

Only on one occasion did I beat a protest, and a very faint one at that, against a measure that would laure to the benefit of the party. There was a very private and select caucus, held in a hotel parlor up-town, and to which I was dragged much against my will by one of the most influential and most corrupt politicians of the City. The assemblage consisted of about fifteen grave and reverend seigniors, all of them top-sawyers in the party, although the majority were not politicians, but merchants and lawyers, who furnished the sinews of war. I had about as much business there as a bull in a china-shop; but being duly vouched for, and discreetly holding my tongue, I was allowed to sit down and listen until I saw fit to take my leave. The question before the meeting was to devise ways and means for electing a Republican member of Congress in a Democratic district. The candidate, a very rich and highly respectable retired merchant, but no more fit to go to Congress than I am, was present, and it seemed to be a well understood thing that he was expected to spend from $20,000 to $25,000 in the canvass. It seemed to be equally well understood that the canvass was to be managed by the old chap, who began to gaze with much interest on my ingenuous countenance, while I amused myself by counting the number of lights in the splendid chandelier that hung from the ceiling. One of them, who evidently had no nonsense about him, stepped up to my sponsor, held a brief and whispered conversation, and returned to his seat, circulating another whisper, which appeared to have a reassuring effect. These amiable, weather-beaten old sinners had evidently done me the honor of taking me for a spy. As soon as I could decently do so, without seeming to confirm their imprudent suspicion, I took my departure, and have never gone near any of them since. But to return to the caucus. The scheme which my friend had to propose was very simple. It consisted in hiring another Democrat to run as an independent candidate, so as to split the vote and allow the Republican to slip in between. This pretty scheme was at first received in silence, which was finally broken by another of the magnates, who gave it as his opinion that it was the only way to do the thing. The running debate which ensued had reference, not to the propriety of acting upon the proposition, but the probability of carrying it to a successful conclusion. One voice only was raised against the measure per se: the candidate, after much preliminary clearing of his throat, and with an abjectly apologetic air, said that he did not wish to be concerned in any action which was not strictly honorable, and that if he could not "run" like a gentleman, he would rather withdraw from the canvass. At this point I thought I had heard enough, and walked off. I don't know what the upshot was, but the gentleman reminded me forcibly of the well-known lady who, vowing she would ne'er consent, consented.

Such briefly and inadequately outlined, was my experience as a well-meaning young man in politics. It was not of a nature to encourage me to try the experiment once more. The present juncture is, no doubt, a very interesting and highly important one, and I hope the reform party, whose existence is almost entirely due to your well-directed efforts, will have all the success which the cause merits.

I should be glad if you would point out some way in which we young men could help along the good cause without becoming tacit accomplices in villainy and corruption. I am by no means a solitary instance; most of the men who were my contemporaries at college take exactly the view which I hold, and although they may not on that account despair of the Republic, they do despair of ever making themselves useful to the State without running that exacting sense of personal honor which they have been taught to hold more sacred than life. Perhaps you will say that such young men are not fit for politics. I am inclined to that opinion myself, and have the reform held aloof from politics, but I should be glad to learn that I am mistaken.

PIERRE DETOUCHE.

NEW-YORK, Sunday, Oct. 8, 1871.

Genet's District.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The importance of securing at least one or two of the Senatorial Districts in the interest of reform at the ensuing election cannot be overestimated. It, therefore, behoves all good citizens who want this realized to look around and see what the chances are to accomplish this purpose. That district now misrepresented by one of Tammany's henchmen—HARRY GENET—seems to be the most vulnerable point of attack from the nature of the composition of its population. It polls about 30,000 votes, of which 7,800 are American born, 5,000 German born, and the balance Irish and other nationalities. As in other districts, so in this, if the German adopted voters would unite with the American voters, both combined would overthrow Tammany rule. It is well known that as far as GENET's influence extends over the Irish of the district, it has rather decreased than been maintained, and the German Democrats are becoming more and more averse and disgusted at his dictating behavior as one of the magnates that bask in the sunshine of TWEED's luminous orb. His connection with the Harlem Court-house job is so well known that all good men in the Democratic Party openly shun him. Reasoning from this, and desirous of taking advantage of all circumstances that may combine to defeat his re-election, the citizens should look around and determine on whom to unite in the campaign against this particular pillar of Tammany Hall.

HARRY CLAUSSEN, a prominent German American, of Yorkville, has been suggested by many as a proper candidate against GENET. Mr. CLAUSSEN, however, does not appear to be willing, for the sacrifice of time and labor, and in his place many of his fellow-countrymen suggest CHRISTIAN SCHWARZ, President of the German up-town Savings Bank, a manufacturer by occupation, an extensive real estate holder and tax-payer, and known to everyone in Yorkville and Harlem as an honest man of the soundest common sense, opposed to all frauds and schemes of corruption. He seems to be the best and most available man who can combine all the elements of opposition to Tammany Hall. He has always taken a decided interest in public matters, as an uncompromising Union man, but not identified with any of the different political factions in the City, and honored alike by Democrats and Republicans. The German-born citizens could nominate him unanimously, the American Republicans and Democrats could find no more suitable and available candidate for the emergency, and as he could be prevailed upon to run against the Harlem Prince of the Tammany Royal family, an earnest effort of all the elements of opposition under him as a candidate would surely succeed, provided always that measures be taken to make it impossible for OAKEY HALL's swindling inspectors to cheat in their count or doctor the returns. If either of Mr. SCHWARZ's sons or Mr. SCHWARZ were put up, indorsed and vouched for by the Committee of Seventy as trustworthy and reliable, the 12,000 German and American voters in the districts would, in all likelihood, be cast solid for either one. And in this case neither reform Democrats nor Republicans could make a party nomination, as every one would see at once that in the event of a regular party nomination that would only make GENET's election a moral certainty. Please call the attention of your readers to these suggestions, and let all who want to get rid of the Harlem Adjutant of TWEED, and stop the outrageous Harlem Court-house job, act accordingly. Yours, &c.,

The Prayer-Book Question.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Having noticed in your issue of the 4th inst. an article by "An Old-Fashioned Clergyman," remarkably well written, and wholly free from the acerbity usual with writers on the question, I would like to say a few words on the same subject.

Your correspondent seems to desire that the proposed omission of the word regeneratis, and the substitution of what he considers synonymous language in the Prayer-book, should be accepted by the Church. While entertaining no superstitious reverence for the mere phraseology of the Prayer-book, and having no objection to any alteration in non-essential language which will promote peace and quietness, I, at the same time, think that it would be an unjustifiable concession to omit any word, or permit any alteration of words which clearly show the harmony of the language of the Prayer-book with the doctrine contained in the Bible. Christ plainly says in John iii., 3-5, "Except a man be born again, (i. e., regenerated,) he cannot see the kingdom of God;" and again, in reply to the rationalistic answer of Nicodemus, He says, "Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God." Thus did He set forth the indispensable necessity of this regeneration by water and the Spirit, to attain everlasting salvation. In Titus iii. 5, the Apostle Paul says: "Not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to His mercy He saved us, by the washing of regeneration (διὰ λουτροῦ παλιγγενεσίας) and renewing of the Holy Ghost." Bishop HALL explains the words, by the washing (i. e., laver) of regeneration as equivalent to the following: "By means of those holy ordinances which He hath appointed; and mainly, as one of them, by the holy sacrament of baptism, which is the laver of our spiritual regeneration." The best expositors are agreed that the word λουτρὸν (bath saved us) means "hath put us in a state of salvation," but in this connection it must denote deliverance from the consequences of previous sins, and the means of future holiness communicated. Chrysostom and many other ancient commentators, together with the most noted of modern times, have agreed that the word παλιγγενεσία (new birth) means baptismal regeneration. It is also manifest from the twenty-seventh article that this is the doctrine of the Church. Therefore, what ever fault may be found with the Prayer-book in this respect, the same fault must be found with the Bible, for the Prayer-book simply re-echoes the teaching of Scripture. No other word than regeneration can possibly be substituted, and the integrity of the doctrine be preserved thereby. There can be no compromise with the truth. Even if we did make this concession, is it to be supposed that this alone would satisfy the tender consciences of all? Would not other alterations be demanded?

The words born again, or regeneration, are often erroneously supposed to mean reformation, or repentance, but if we carefully consider these words of Christ, it must be evident that our Lord here alludes to some mystery far deeper than that which attaches to the ordinary working of the Holy Spirit on the heart.

Upon this and all other similar questions it behooves one to thoroughly satisfy his conscience before he is ordained as priest, and if afterward he finds that he has not sufficiently investigated the subject, and his conscience will not allow him to assent to the doctrine, it is his duty as an honest man to withdraw himself from the office he holds; for he must recollect that it is not he alone who is affected in the matter, but that those to whom, in a sacerdotal capacity, he administers the sacraments, require a faithful performance of the functions which his position demands. His conscience may be a guide for himself, but he must not attempt to lord it over other men's consciences. He must not continue in his profession of priest and refuse to obey the doctrines of the Church.

There is too great a tendency at the present day to make light of the sacraments, and because their mysteries cannot be penetrated by human vision, to underrate their importance. It is far better to make too much of a sacrament than too little.

However large the number may be which the proposed amendment will draw us to us, it will never do to yield this point, for such action will form the entering wedge of endless alterations. In so far as the Prayer-book is Scriptural, let us not yield one iota to the clamor for omission or substitution of words.

The Young Men.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

As a member of the "Nineteenth Ward Council of Political Reform," I represent a nucleus of young men who desire to unite our efforts and combine our action, if possible, with every young man who is a friend to honesty and a foe to fraud, and as heirs apparent to the Empire City take the initiatory step and organize as the Young Men's Council of Political and Moral Reform, with a view of acting in concert with the original, for the furtherance of their commendable and great object, which is "correcting public abuses, of securing the competent and righteous administration of our City and State Governments, and, by the influence of our united action, of compelling one or both of the political parties to put in nomination for office only intelligent, high-minded, and incorruptible citizens."

The reasons are many and obvious why we should act here and now. Without going into detail, a few of them are, the dire necessity, there is work to be done, and it is to say the least cowardly not to share it with the old men among whom are our fathers, relatives and friends; many of them with hair silvered with gray are now at work day and night. Their wise council and mature judgment, assisted and encouraged by our young and well-directed concert of action, must release our City from its present ignominious condition. Singly, we can do little; collectively, we, the young men of New-York and vicinity, can make our influence felt politically and morally the length and breadth of our country. Yes, we have the power to shake the seat of the Presidential chair, and unseat the occupant if tainted with corruption.

Let us organize in time to act as committees of vigilance at our approaching election. There is work for those under age also. We can be a thorn in the sides of repeaters. We ask from every friend of this a word of encouragement by mail, addressed to E. H. L. W., No. 188 East Fifty-fifth-street, or through the Press, and from every young man, through some medium, their views and assent to be co-laborers. You must be for or against us. There is no middle ground. "Be men! Is it Rules like these that tell us we are men."

Next Tuesday's TIMES will announce a place and time of meeting.

The Eighth Judicial District.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

There have appeared in the columns of your paper lately two or three short articles relative to the action to be taken and the result of the Judicial Convention of the Eighth Judicial District, recently held at Buffalo, and in justice to Judge MARVIN and the wide and honored reputation he has achieved, it is proper to explain a little in order that the public may understand and know the true position occupied by him. It was incorrectly stated that he age was sixty-nine years, and that he was not a candidate for renomination and re-election, for at the time the articles now referred to were published, and long previous thereto, it was known that the Bar of this district, irrespective of party, desired to compliment Judge MARVIN by a renomination and re-election, and continue him on the Bench he has so long honored. Judge MARVIN dealt candidly and frankly with the entire Bar, saying to them, "If you see fit to renominate and elect me, I will serve the remaining two years the new judicial constitutional provision will permit me to serve; but if you are prepared to name my successor, I will retire at the close of my present term." Almost the unanimous response of the Bar has been, "We wish you to continue your official relations with us, and I you can do so, as no other" And there appeared to be no public movement in opposition to this expression of public feeling. The result of the Convention was a surprise to Judge MARVIN, and to the Bar and people generally of this district. The Convention was not such an one as was expected to assemble; the means resorted to to produce Judge MARVIN's defeat are being well understood throughout the entire district, and a feeling of disappointment seems to prevail. It was not a fair representation of the feeling of the Bar or the people generally. Judge MARVIN's health is good, his mind is as quiet and as accurate as it ever was, and he is a man of the purest principles and motives. During his long judicial career of nearly a quarter of a century he has endeared himself to the people of his district, so that there exists the kindest and most tender feeling that could exist between the Bar, the people, and the Judge. His eminent judicial knowledge, his firmness of character, yet tenderness of heart, are a benefit to those who know him, and it is to be regretted that the services of a man so just, so pure, and yet so firm, should be lost to the people of the district he has so long presided over, and so greatly assisted by strict integrity and a careful and untiring devotion to the duties of his office, in placing it among the most honored in our State.

By inserting the above in the columns of your valuable paper, you will do an act of justice both to the extended reputation of Judge MARVIN and to the public generally.

AN ATTENTIVE OBSERVER.

JAMESTOWN, Wednesday, Oct. 11, 1871.

The Chicago Sufferers—Appeal to the Sunday-Schools of New-York City and Long Island.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The writer of this appeal having been in Chicago during the terrible fire which has devastated the beauty and grandeur of that great city, and rendered one-third of its population houseless and homeless, witnessed during that fearful carnival of flame scenes of suffering and distress which baffle all description. No word-painting can accurately describe these heart-rending spectacles, nor can any flights of imagination, however wild, fully realize the awfulness of the scenes which, during that fiery ordeal, abounded on every side. It is not my present purpose to attempt a recital of those woes, but to call the attention of the children of our numerous Sunday-schools to them, and to suggest that they can do much toward relieving the thousands of little sufferers, now homeless and destitute in the devastated city. Hundreds of helpless little ones were to be seen, suffering from terror, hunger, and want of sufficient clothing, seeking shelter amid inhospitable ruins where no shelter was to be found. My appeal is to children more favored of God, to come to the relief of their sorely afflicted little brothers and sisters by contributions of money and clothing. I know such an appeal will not be in vain. Let the response be generous, hearty and prompt. I know the little ones will act well their part, if their officers and teachers will lead them. No gift is too small to be gratefully received. Representing, in New-York, a Chicago firm, I shall be glad to receive and forward through our Chicago office all such contributions as may be intended for me for the suffering children of that stricken city.

WILLIAM WALLACE,

Late Superintendent of St. Paul's Church Sunday-school, Brooklyn, E. D.

New-York office, No. 129 Broad-street.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 16, 1871.

SENATOR BROWNLOW.

His Card to the People of Tennessee—Defense of His Administration as Governor.

From the Knoxville Chronicle.

The rebel Governor of Tennessee delivered his inaugural address on Tuesday last, and in that extraordinary assertion:

"The public debt, in the short period of four years, swelled from sixteen to forty-two millions of dollars."

Had some newspaper scribbler and partisan reporter for a partisan sheet made the foregoing statement, I could have excused it, but in the Governor of a State, who is presumed to inform himself on the condition of the State whose Chief Magistrate he is, such recklessness of assertion is wholly unexcusable.

It is such a monstrous perversion of truth that in charity I attribute it to His Excellency's ignorance, and in his zeal to curry favor with his new associates—the virtuous (!) Democracy. I propose briefly to state the facts which I duly sworn to, or his bitterest rebel partisan coadjutors to controvert.

The statement that since the war and during my administration of the State Government, "the public debt in the short period of four years, swelled from $16,000,000 to $43,000,000" is recklessly made in total ignorance of the facts or with a view to serve the interests of the "lost cause." Not having before me the official reports of the Controller and other State officers, I cannot give the exact figures in dollars and cents, but will give them in round numbers, which are substantially the official reports. The entire State debt at the beginning of the war was about eighteen millions, instead of sixteen, as the Governor asserts. The interest which accumulated during the war was about four millions five hundred thousand, and the debt that matured during the war was about half a million, making the State debt at the close of the war about twenty-three millions.

Since then, over a million dollars of that debt has matured and been funded by the issuance of new bonds. It will be seen that Gov. BROWN attributes to the Republican Party an increase of the debt by five million that matured during the war and one million since, before there was a Republican Party in Tennessee. And even upon that assumption his statements are greatly exaggerated. The actual amount of the increase of the debt since the war, for all purposes, does not exceed fourteen millions. The Governor has its twenty-six millions—an error of twelve millions.

When the much-abused Republican Party, which Gov. BROWN, throughout his inaugural, assails with such virulence, got possession of the State, they found nearly all the railroads in the State in a condition of bankruptcy and ruin, caused by the same nefarious rebellion which Gov. BROWN materially aided. And from all parts of the State the rebel officers, stockholders and directors of these railroads, flocked to the capital, and implored the Republican Party to lend them the credit of the State by the issuance of bonds, for the rebuilding of bridges, depots and trestle-work. The question, therefore, was "Shall we let the State's property in these roads be totally lost, or shall we put them on their feet and in a condition to be serviceable to the State and its citizens?" I used whatever of influence I and to loan them the credit of the State.

Gov. BROWN, in his inaugural, says that, when the sceptre passed from the hands of the Republican Party, peace again reigned over a blighted country. The facts are, that, when he was writing his inaugural, his political friends, known as the Kuklux Klan, in three counties north of the State's capital were shooting and hanging no less than four Union men and negroes in one night, taking the negroes forcibly from the jail. By the way, the Kuklux Klan, which Gen. N. B. FORREST boasted and bored a hole in Tennessee to hell their origin in Giles County, the home of Gov. BROWN. What relation, if any, he sustained to the Order I am not prepared to say.

Instead of Tennessee being quiet and peaceable, as Gov. BROWN represents it, I believe we ought to have martial law proclaimed, and Federal troops enough sent to the State to protect every citizen in his rights and put a stop to the murder of citizens by Gov. BROWN's partisan Kuklux friends. And I don't hesitate to say that I would support such a proposition in the United States Senate.

In conclusion, I would express the hope that Gov. BROWN and his new legislators, who propose to have so much at heart the financial condition of the State, will not increase its indebtedness by ordering the redemption (as now seems probable) of the bogus issues of the Bank of Tennessee, which were printed and circulated for the equipping and arming of thousands of rebels to war upon the Federal Government.

First Mortgage, Convertible, 7 Per Cent. Gold Bonds
OF THE
PEORIA & ROCK ISLAND RAILWAY
OF ILLINOIS.

First Mortgage Bonds - - - $1,500,000
Capital Stock - - - - - - - 2,000,000

This is a COMPLETED Road 91 miles in length, connecting the important Cities of Peoria on the Illinois River, and Rock Island, Moline and Davenport, on the Mississippi. Davenport, on the opposite bank of the river, is connected by a railway bridge. The last rail of this road was laid July 7, 1871, and the line is now open and being operated with a success exceeding all anticipation. In order to place upon the road the large equipment necessary for the business offered, and to construct depots, car and engine-houses, machine-shops, &c., equal to any of the best old roads in the country, as is now required of this, the Company offer, through the undersigned, $1,500,000 convertible first mortgage gold bonds, which cover the entire property of the Company, and is less than $17,000 per mile. PRESENT PRICE, 90, AND ACCRUED INTEREST IN CURRENCY. Principal and interest payable in coin at New-York or London, free of tax. Coupons payable February and Aug. 1.

This road, opened for the immense local as well as through traffic, now offered, will prove one of the most profitable in the West, traversing as it does a section of country unsurpassed in fertility of soil and agricultural resources, already thickly populated and in a high state of cultivation. This is self evident from the fact that every section of the road passes through cultivated fields and many flourishing towns and villages, with a large city and navigable river at each end. Railroads in the West have been heretofore constructed through unsettled and uncultivated regions of the country, consequently have had but little local traffic to depend upon for several years after construction. But the Peoria and Rock Island Railway is a first class COMPLETED road, with NO PARALLEL or COMPETING LINE, and RUNS THROUGH ONE OF THE RICHEST AGRICULTURAL, MANUFACTURING AND MOST POPULOUS DISTRICTS IN THE WEST. Thus it is certain that the local business is already more than enough to sustain the road, while the through traffic is unlimited, as its connections are numerous, which can be seen by a glance at the map.

This road is a grand central link, to which many of the principal lines centralize and diverge to all parts of the continent.

We invite the attention of investors to this loan. Being familiar with the wealth and resources of the country along the line of this railway and A MEMBER OF OUR FIRM HAVING MADE A CAREFUL EXAMINATION OF THE ROAD AND ITS PROPERTY, WE CAN WITH THE UTMOST CONFIDENCE RECOMMEND THE BONDS AS A PRIME SECURITY, reliable and safe in every particular.

All marketable securities received in exchange at full rates, and bonds delivered to all parts of the country, free of express charges.

Maps, circulars, &c., with full particulars relating to the road, furnished on application by the undersigned, Financial Agents of the Company.

NOTICE TO STOCKHOLDERS.

Notice is hereby given to the stockholders of this Company, that they will have the privilege of subscribing for new stock in the proportion of one share for every five, and one share for every fraction of five shares greater than one-half, as registered in their name Oct. 30, 1871, to be paid for at the rate of seventy-five cents on the dollar.

Subscriptions will be received, and the first installment of fifty per centum will be payable between the 1st day of November and 1st day of December, 1871. Second installment of fifty per centum will be payable on the 25th day of February, 1872, and if not paid on or before that date, the right to the stock subscribed for will cease.

If stockholders prefer, the whole amount can be paid at the time of subscription. Interest to Feb. 1, 1872, at the rate of seven per centum per annum, will be allowed on all paid installments, at which time certificate of stock will be issued. This interest will be paid with the February dividend.

Stockholders registered in New-York will subscribe and pay at the office of the United States Trust Company, No. 49 Wall-st., New-York; all others at the office of the Treasurer in Cleveland, Ohio.

No subscriptions will be received after Dec. 1, 1871.

The transfer books will close Oct. 20, and reopen Nov 2, 1871.

By order of the Board of Directors.

$600,000
OF THE SEVEN PER CENT. FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS OF THE SOUTH CAROLINA RAILROAD COMPANY.

Principal due 1st January, 1893, and coupons payable in New-York 1st January and 1st July.

These bonds are the only mortgage lien on the railway and rolling stock of the corporation, and are for less than $12,000 per mile.

The gross receipts of the Company for 1870 amounted to $1,468,340 38-100; operating expenses and renewals, $816,038 82; showing a profit of $652,301 71, or $238,301 71 in excess of the annual interest of Seven per Cent. on 1,000,000 first mortgage bonds.

The South Carolina Railway is one of the earliest built railways in the United States; its affairs have ever been managed with care and integrity, and its present condition of the property is that of complete restoration. We recommend its mortgage bonds to investors with the assurance of their being a first-class security.

The above are offered for sale by the undersigned at 87½ per cent.

OFFICE LAKE SHORE AND MICHIGAN SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY,
CLEVELAND, Sept. 16, 1871.

TO THE HOLDERS OF THE COMMON stock of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company:

Notice is hereby given, that this Company offers to the holders of the common stock of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company Seventeen Millions of Dollars of the capital stock of this Company, issued in pursuance of the vote of the stockholders of this Company, taken under the provisions of its charter, at a meeting of the stockholders held at the City of Cleveland, Ohio, on the 27th day of July, 1871.

Each shareholder of the common stock will be entitled to forty per cent. of the par of the stock held by him, upon the payment of thirty-three and one-third per cent. of the par thereof, in the manner following, viz.: Ten per cent. of the par thereof on the 1st day of November next, the further sum of ten per cent. of the par thereof on the 1st day of December next, and the residue of said thirty-three and one-third per cent. at such time as the same may be called.

Notice of the calls for installment payable subsequent to the 1st day of December next, will be given to the stockholders, by publication in a newspaper published in the City of Cleveland, Ohio, and also in a newspaper published in the City of New-York, at least thirty days before the day on which payment is required.

The whole of said residue will be called for on or before the 1st day of August, 1872.

If payment shall not be made in accordance with such calls, which may be made, all rights to such stock shall cease, and the stock will be disposed of for the account and benefit of the Company.

Scrip certificates will be issued on the payment of the first installment called for Nov. 1. Payments of subsequent calls will, as the same are from time to time made, be stamped upon the scrip certificate.

The scrip certificates will be transferable on the books of the Company.

On payment of the thirty-three and one-third per cent. certificates for full-paid stock will be issued upon the surrender for cancelment of the scrip certificates.

Dividends upon the sum of the installments actually paid in, will be declared, payable at the same rates and time as upon common stock.

Payments of the calls are to be made at the office of the Union Trust Company of New-York, and a presentation at the stock certificates will be required, to the end that the issue of the scrip certificates may be stamped thereon.

The stock transfer-books will be opened on Monday, the 25th day of September inst., and will be closed on Saturday, the 7th day of October next.

$150,000 NEW-JERSEY INVESTMENT
VINELAND RAILWAY BONDS.

$16,000 per mile, Seven per Cent., free of tax; interest due April and October. Principal payable 1890.

The undersigned offers the unsold balance of the First and only Mortgage Bonds of the Vineland Railway Company, the entire Loan being $750,000.

The line begins at the terminus of the New-Jersey Southern Railroad, and extends to the Delaware River, is 47¼ miles, and traverses the garden of New-Jersey—almost the entire length passing through a rich and cultivated country,—the products of which will be brought to Philadelphia and New-York by this line.

The flourishing towns of Vineland and Bridgeton are on the route.

On the opposite shore of the Delaware River the Smyrna Road is constructing, and will form a part of a through line to Baltimore.

Thirty-seven miles are now operated, and the remaining ten miles will be laid by Sept. 20.

The road-bed is not surpassed in the United States. Traffic constantly increasing.

The investment is secure beyond question. For a short time the price will be 88 and accrued interest.

These bonds are in good demand, and we recommend them as safe and most remunerative. The popularity of these Bonds is partly due to the fact that the interest is paid out of capital, as has to be done by some other incipient enterprises. The Rondout and Oswego Railroad Company are doing a prosperous business. The net earnings of the road already amount to 10 per cent. on all the Bonds to be issued. Fifty miles are now in operation, and the remaining fifty miles will be opened next Summer, fifteen miles being almost finished. The road passes through a rich agricultural district heretofore shut out from railroad facilities, in the local traffic of which will be good, while its connections will give it a large through traffic between the great lakes and deep-water navigation on the Hudson. The resources of the road to this day allow the true condition to be examined and thoroughly known by the bondholder. By procuring these Bonds in exchange for Five-twenties, the investor gets a Bond equally sound and safe, but also adds to his capital more than 25 per cent., while to his income he adds more than 47½ per cent.
